Socreds flip, Maggie sails

The provincial government has reversed itself and will put the Princess Marguerite back on the Victoria-Seattle run again this summer, the Times learned today from a reliable source.

The government has been under intense pressure from local businessmen and tourist officials over its decision to replace the Marguerite with the Queen of Prince Rupert.

The Times has learned that the government has retained a Seattle marine broker, who is now in Washington, D.C., arranging an extension of a waiver granted last year by the U.S. Coast Guard which exempted the Marguerite from new marine sanitation regulations.

They would have otherwise required expensive holding tanks to be installed in the 32-year-old steamship.

A coast guard spokesman in Seattle said today a number of exemptions have been arranged for vessels for special reasons. If they were about to be sold or scrapped, for example, the owners wouldn't want to waste money.

It would be possible to grant the Marguerite another year's extension, he said. That decision would have to be made at Coast Guard headquarters in the U.S. capital, however.

The provincial government until now has been adamant on getting rid of the Marguerite. Finance Minister Hugh Curtis last month announced that the smaller Queen of Prince Rupert would be refitted for the Seattle service.

But in the last two weeks, the government has apparently realized that the Rupert cannot be drydocked and refitted in time for the traditional mid-May start-up date.

Experts have also advised the government that it would be impractical to have the slower Queen of Prince Rupert make two round trips a day, to bring the total carrying capacity up to the Marguerite's.

The B.C. Steamship Co. Ltd. the government corporation which has operated the vessel since the province bought her from the CPR seven years ago, commissioned consultants to study the Marguerite.

Transportation Minister Alex Fraser has said they determined the ship was unsafe, but Canadian coast guard officials have refuted that claim.

Recycled throne speech

By JAKE BANKY

The throne speech opening the second session of B.C.'s 32nd Parliament is a tribute to the art of recycling.

In a waste not, want not approach, Premier Bill Bennett:

— Brings back last year's promise of a denticare program.

— Repeats at length the energy policy announced earlier this month.

— Renews his oft-stated commitment to reforestation.

— Re-states last week's promise of an Annacis Island crossing for Vancouver and speaks glowingly of the prospects for trade with Pacific Rim countries.

At a press conference after the release of the speech, Bennett provided little flesh for the bare bones outlines of the throne speech.

Reforestation stressed

Bennett singled out as an item of prime importance the promise of a major, longterm commitment to perpetual reforestation which will "ensure the future of the most important renewable resource in B.C."

But he said details of government programs must await the introduction of legislation or the budget that will be brought in March 10.

Conspicuous by its absence from this year's speech is the B.C. Bill of Rights, promised last year.

Bennett said such legislation is still a commitment of his government.

"It will be coming. But there are always difficulties in enshrining rights and in brevity without creating problems for the very people you set out to help."

Also missing from the throne speech is long-awaited legislation to provide a new approach to regional districts.

Bennett hinted, however, this issue may yet be dealt with during the session.

The premier rejected criticism that the speech is a rehash and that the government is short of good, new ideas.

Bennett said such criticism doesn't come from the people, it comes from the press.

He suggested those members of the media who feel they could do a better job than the politicians should run as candidates and any politician who feels he could do a better job than the media should quit and start writing a newspaper column.

Threadbare: Barrett

NDP leader Dave Barrett was quick to register his disappointment over what he said was the lack of sustance in the speech.

"It is a very poor and threadbare document. It appears to be a continuation of the ad-hoc process of this government, throwing together old promises and old statements and attempting to make them into a new throne speech," Barrett said.

"There really isn't anything exciting in the speech at all."

Barrett said the speech fails to deal with the basic problems faced by the province and was particularly critical of a lack of solid programs to deal with unemployment.

The throne speech, read by Lieut.-Gov. Henry Bell-Irving, says on denticare:

"My government is determined that British

Foresake patients? Nurses find thought inconceivable

By PAUL MINVIELLE

B.C.'s registered nurses voted 98.1 per cent in favor of strike action Tuesday but few of them can conceive of actually having to abandon their patients.

Most find the idea unthinkable.

But they're bound and determined to get a square financial deal and in their fight for more pay, they're being backed by the B.C. Medical Association.

Jo Vipond, a registered psychiatric nurse as well as an RN, took time out on a coffee break this morning to tell the Times the vote the nurses took was merely to show solidarity with the Registered Nurses Association of B.C.

The RNABC is the nurses' professional group as well as its bargaining agent.

Vipond can't understand how the situation arose.

Asked if she thought nurses might settle for less than the 18 per cent in one year the RNABC has demanded, she shakes her head.

"Grocery clerks, liquor store employees . . . they all get more than we do. We won't settle for less."

But the consensus among nurses is that a settlement will be reached long before a strike is necessary.

If there is a strike, the essential services in any hospital will probably be used to keep most of the full-time nurses working.

One nurse said there would be action rather than a full-scale strike and suggested one move might be to set up a picket line just before a shift change.

Nurses coming to work wouldn't be able to cross the line to report to work, so the nurses on duty would have to stay on for an extra shift, at overtime rates.

But no nurse interviewed by the Times believes she'll actually have to be off the job and without pay for any length of time.

If it comes to that, there will be no strike benefits to live on, as the RNABC has no strike fund.

Alice Baptist, who works with Vipond in the ear, nose and throat department, was upset with talk-show callers suggesting nurses don't do any hard work or that a nurse's salary is usually a family's second income.

Baptist pointed out that there are no licensed practical nurses in the ENT ward — or in any other specialty ward — so nurses not only have all the responsibility for medication and care, but also do the menial tasks, including emptying bedpans.

Vipond said she is separated and supporting a child.

"This isn't a second income — it's my only income."

She also mentioned the hazards of the job, such as coming into constant contact with disease on the medical floors.

And when she worked in psychiatric wards, there was the danger of being attacked.

Miners found dead

GRANDE CACHE, Alta. (CP) — Four miners have died in the collapse of a tunnel in a coal mine near Grande Cache, Alta.

One of the dead men was identified as Alan Gill.

"He was struck by falling rock and was killed instantly," said Bill Rozel, executive director of work site services for the provincial department of mines

Rozel said the man's body was recovered shortly before noon.

Another miner, Willy Morton, 24, who was operating a mechanical coal digger, was buried alive but was dug out quickly by other workers. He was not seriously injured.

Rescue crews went into the mine almost immediately after the roof collapse shortly before noon Thursday and worked through the night.

Early Friday there were reports the trapped men might be reached within an hour. But as the morning wore on, there was no indication the rescuers had reached the trapped workers.

Rozel said the "accident appears to be a massive roof collapse near the mine face."

Libel suit

OTTAWA (CP) — Notice of a libel action has been served on the Ottawa Journal nal on behalf of James Coutts, senior aide to Pierre Trudeau, it was reported Thursday.

Kevin Doyle, editor of FP News Service, said the notice of libel concerns a column by Allan Fotheringham of the news service which appeared in The Journal Feb. 16.

Gas price up tomorrow

Gasoline retail prices will rise .7 cents a litre (3.15 cents a gallon) and fuel oil retail prices, 1.3 cents a litre (3.5 cents a gallon), effective Saturday, an energy department official said today in Ottawa.

In Victoria, retailers have not been advised of the increase but expect to be told on short notice to alter their pump prices.

The higher prices reflect a crude oil rise of $1 to $14.75 a barrel allowable Jan. 1. But under a directive from the federal government, refiners were not to pass the increase on for 60 days.

B.C. braces to fight Mideast heroin flood

By DEREK SIDENIUS

B.C.'s top crime-fighting organization — the Coordinated Law Enforcement Unit — is bracing for a massive upsurge in the heroin trade.

Top CLEU officials told the Times the breakdown in the mid-East political scene has virtually wiped out efforts by drug enforcers to curb poppy growing.

Fields which have been dormant for years are now being cultivated and drug smugglers have launched a major effort to process and move heroin through Europe into the multi-billion dollar North American market, according to field intelligence sources.

The threat of a massive increase in heroin has alarmed CLEU and its counterpart drug-fighting agencies across Canada and the U.S.

Dr. Malcolm Mathieson, chairman of the drug strategy committee of the attorney-general's ministry, said in an interview Thursday Mideast heroin is already appearing in cities along the east coast of North America.

If the flow isn't checked, he said, he fears a return to the high heroin growth rate experienced in B.C. in the early 1970s.

During that period the number of known heroin addicts more than doubled to about 6,000 in B.C.

Another 3,000 to 4,000 persons were casual heroin users.

The figures are about the same today and represent 60 per cent of the heroin addict population in Canada.

Mathieson said the Mideast threat has created a critical situation and called for the provincial and federal governments to work out a common policy.

Mathieson said B.C. is pushing for a multi-strategy approach.

Essentially it wants a larger share of Canada's drug enforcement manpower stationed in B.C.

The province has 60 per cent of the addicts but only 25 per cent of the manpower.

In addition the province is Midnight deadline

Midnight tonight's the deadline to get your 1980 licence decal affixed to your vehicles.

In most cases the decal goes on the rear plate but read the instructions on the back first to be sure.

Motorists who forget can expect the worst.

Greater Victoria police will start issuing tickets at one second past midnight.

Motorists who have bought decals but who neglect to display them will face a $15 fine.

Motorists who haven't bought the new decals and are caught driving will face a minimum $285 fine.

And those motorists who think they can just leave their unlicenced cars parked on the street or in public-access parking lots will be sadly mistaken.

There's a fine for that, too — $35.

Two arrested, $10,000 loot recovered

Oak Bay police have arrested two teenagers and seized more than $10,000 worth of property believed stolen from scores of vehicles in Greater Victoria in the past two months.

The youths, aged 17 and 18, both from Oak Bay, were to appear in provincial court later today charged with several counts of theft and fraud.

The arrests came after Oak Bay Constable Ron Coull became curious about four youths talking in the back of van parked in a shopping centre at Fort and Foul Bay at 4 p.m. Thursday.

Coull noticed a quantity of stereo equipment in the back and when the youths were unable to give a reasonable explanation where it all came from, he took them into custody for questioning, a spokesman said.

Two of the youths were subsequently released.

Later police searched two homes in Oak Bay and seized merchandise including stereo tapes, decks, tools, camera equipment, clothing, camping gear, and credit cards.

The spokesman said all the goods had been reported stolen from vehicles in Greater Victoria since the first of the year.

He said some of the credit cards that were stolen were used for a skiing vacation to Courtenay and purchase of motorcycle parts, clothing, food and lodging on the way.

Five women freed

BOGOTA, Colombia (UPI) — Leftist guerrillas freed their last five women hostages today opening the way for negotiations on ransom demands for the release of 40 diplomats seized two days ago in an attack on the Dominican Embassy residence.

The five women walked out shortly after 9 a.m., entered four automobiles and left the area. Their release was about an hour later than the time originally announced.

The guerrillas, who are demanding $50 million ransom and freedom for more than 300 of their jailed comrades, had relased 10 other women, a 16-year-old boy and two wounded men Thrusday night. They still are holding an estimated 40 diplomats, including the U.S. Ambassador and the papal nuncio.

Meanwhile, in Panama City, Panamanian leftists proclaiming sympathy with dissidents in El Salvador seized the Salvadoran Embassy in Panama City for two hours Thursday and held six persons hostage, then freed them and left peacefully.

Police said no one was hurt in the takeover.

Bank rates hit 16¾ per cent

Times News Services

Citibank, second largest bank in the United States, raised its prime lending rate on business loans to a record 16¾ per cent today. Several other U.S. banks promptly matched the increase.

Citibank raised its rate from 16¼ per cent, a rate it set just a week ago. Many other major banks had already moved to 16½ per cent.

Meanwhile, in Montreal, the Royal Bank of Canada announced an increase in interest rates on mortgages and investment certificates, following the lead of several other banks.

The one-year open mortgage rate moves to 15 per cent from 14.75. The three-year open rate rises to 15.25 from 15 and three-and five-year term closed mortgage rates rise to 14.50 from 13.75.

The bank's mortgage affiliate, RoyMor, is increasing the interest rate on five-year investment certificates by three-quarters of one per cent to 12.75 per cent when paid semi-annually and to 13 when paid once a year.

The bank's last increase in mortgage rates occurred Feb. 18.

She recalls incidents where nurses suffered broken noses and teeth punched out.

"There was no extra pay for that, no special compensation."

The nurses feel there is also the danger that if nurses' salaries don't catch up with other profressions and jobs, young girls will stop choosing nursing as a career.

Three student nurses, however, admitted they weren't going into nursing for the money.

Elizabeth Tudor pointed out that she worked for Glendale Laundry before entering nursing school and had she stayed, she'd be making more money than she's going to be making as a nurse when she graduates.

Asked if they'd fill in on wards if ordered, Chris Fuller replied: "They can't do that. They just can't."

Ferry union bosses quit

By MIKE HUGHES

The B.C. Ferry and Marine Workers Union is in turmoil again, this time rocked by the resignation of six union officials.

The resignations came at a meeting Wednesday night in Vancouver where Bill Smalley, a Canadian Labor Congress official who is acting as a trustee of the 2,700-member union, presented an interim report.

Those who resigned were Leo Neill, secretary-treasurer; Matt Brown, business agent; Joyce Burns, second vice-president, and the chairmen from the union's three committee's at Langdale, Horseshoe Bay and Deas maintenance dock.

Smalley said Neill and Brown resigned following the tabling of a financial report critical of the procedures used in the handling of funds.

There was no charge of wrongdoing, however, Smalley added.

Smalley, in his report, recommends that Brown be fired to ease the in-fighting but such a proposal became redundant when Brown and Neill resigned at the beginning of the meeting.

Brown has long been recognized as one of the chief opponents of union president Shirley Mathieson and her style of administration.

Mathieson asked the CLC in December to place the union in trusteeship because of internal conflict.

Smalley said he is not convinced that his report had anything to do with the resignations.

In his report, Smalley recommended that the union poll its members on whether they are interested in returning to the B.C. Government Employees Union.

The move was rejected by the executive as being unnecessary.

The executive did approve another Smalley recommendation which called for a special convention to consider changes in the union's constitution as a means of solving some of the internal problems.

On the agenda would be the formation of some structure which would allow the licensed and unlicensed segments of the union "to live in some kind of harmony."

Up until 1977, the ferry workers were organized into the licensed and unlicensed components of the BCGEU.

However, after the ferry operations became a crown corporation, both groups were lumped together in the B.C. Ferry and Marine Workers Union, an affiliate of the BCGEU.

There has been conflict between the licensed and unlicensed groups and Smalley said the ferry workers would have a stronger case before the Labor Relations Board for separate units if they resumed the two-component structure.

Smalley said he felt it was irresponsible for the officials to resign. By doing so they have denied the faction they represent the opportunity to voice an opinion, he added.

He said some of those who resigned still want a leadership convention but that is constitutionally impossible.

He said the union constitution states that special conventions cannot deal with the election of table officers.

The next opportunity to change leadership will be at the next regular convention in 1981, Smalley said.

He said he will likely continue on as a trustee of the union until after the special convention and then probably remain in a "watching situation" after that time depending on how things go.

anxious to tackle the demand side of the problem — subjecting addicts to treatment programs.

But a joint federal-provincial task force set up three years ago to draft recommendations on how to combat the problem has still not reached the ear of federal cabinet.

And B.C.'s controversial heroin treatment program, started last April, has become so embroiled in legal problems it's future is in grave doubt.

Mathieson said opium growing in remote regions of Iran, Afghanistan and Pakistan has mushroomed in the past year.

American drug intelligence reports estimated the total production in 1979 in the three countries — an area dubbed the Golden Crescent to distinguish it from the Golden Triangle of southeastern Asia — was 1,600 metric tons. Some 600 tons is believed to have found its way onto the international market.

Nielsen sugars Olympic rebate?

Consumer Affairs Minister Jim Nielsen has promised to help tourists from B.C. to recover money they forfeit by cancelling trips to the summer Olympics in Moscow.

Nielsen said Thursday he is trying to get Sears Travel Ltd. to improve an offer it has made to customers cancelling trips to the Soviet Union to protest the Russian invasion of Afghanistan.

Sears has extended the cancellation date to March 22 from March 1 but Nielsen said he still is not satisfied.

"Anyone cancelling at this time is required to pay a $400 cancellation fee," the minister said. "This represents only about 25 per cent of the total cost of the tour.

"If the games are cancelled or Canada boycotts them, travellers can cancel for only $100. This is a much more reasonable figure."

Truck ignites on ferry

Spontaneous combustion is believed the cause of a fire that broke out in some insulation in a semi-trailer on the B.C. Ferries Queen of Victoria Thursday afternoon.

The fire was spotted by a passenger as the vessel was approaching Swartz Bay on its 1 p.m. run out of Tsawwassen.

Crew alerted the truck driver, Ed Brooke, who was asleep in his cab, and kept the smouldering fire under control until the ferry docked.

Vehicles ahead of the truck were moved off and Brooke drove the truck into a parking lot where a fire truck was waiting.

The truck was owned by Grassick Transport Ltd., 220 Esquimalt.

Mideast report public

OTTAWA (CP) — Former Conservative leader Robert Stanfield has suggested Canada broaden its contacts with the Palestine Liberation Organization as the country seeks to enhance its relationships with the Middle East.

Stanfield, who conducted a Middle East study for Prime Minister Clark, also said the Canadian Human Rights Act might be a good instrument to counteract the Arab boycott-of-Israel policy.

And he said that Canada must be prepared to provide peacekeeping and other help if and when there is settlement of the Arab-Israel disputes.

Clark released the 25-page report only days before he was to step down and hand over the prime minister's job to Liberal Pierre Trudeau.

Vernon slices use of energy

VERNON (CP) — Energy Day in this Okanagan city has been deemed a success, although residents were unable to set a Canadian record for energy conservation.

The record 18-per-cent reduction in consumption, set last year by Melfort, Sask., still stands, but Vernon claims a record in reducing natural gas consumption.

Readings in both electricity and gas consumption were taken before and after Energy Day by B.C. Hydro and Inland Natural Gas.

Residents reduced electricity consumption by 13.4 per cent and gas dropped 18.1 per cent.

Pipe may hike B.C. oil cost

. . . oil going east?

B.C.'s secure oil supply could be endangered if the Trans Mountain Pipe Line Ltd. proposal to ship Alaskan oil east to U.S. markets is adopted, former B.C. energy minister Jack Davis said Thursday.

Davis, Social Credit MLA for North Vancouver-Seymour, also said if the line — cheapest of three major alternatives being considered — is selected it will also mean higher prices to B.C. consumers as local refineries try to adjust to foreign crude oil imports.

He said if the Trans Mountain proposal goes ahead, oil now shipped to B.C. from Alberta may be diverted by the federal government toward markets in the Prairies, southern Ontario and western Quebec.

Under the $500 million Trans Mountain plan, oil from Alaska would be unloaded from tankers in Washington state and shipped over an 840-kilometre pipeline through B.C. to Edmonton and then to markets in the U.S. Mid-West.

The competing proposals are construction of a $1.5 billion Northern Tier route, now favored by President Jimmy Carter, which would go entirely through the U.S., and the $1.8 billion Foothills Oil Pipe Line Ltd. proposal to move oil south in a line along the Alaska Highway.

Davis, energy, transport and communications minister for B.C. before he was dumped from the cabinet in 1978 after converting government-issued airline tickets for cash, says he favors the overland Foothills proposal above the others. Both Northern Tier and Trans Mountain would require increased oil tanker travel down the Pacific Coast.

Davis said in an interview that the Northern Tier proposal probably will not go ahead because at present there is not enough Alaskan oil available to justify the cost.

That would leave the Trans Mountain route as the leading contender from the American viewpoint.

"My concern is one of security of supply for B.C.," he said. "For 30 years we have drawn on Alberta oil. We've had priority after Alberta itself.

B.C., which uses oil to produce 45 per cent of its energy needs, is heavily dependent on Alberta's high-grade, sweet crude oil, he said.

Davis said it is conceivable that parallel pipelines could exist, shipping Alaskan oil eastward and Alberta oil westward, but the economics of that situation is questionable.

The result is that Alberta oil would go to central and eastern Canada unless further oil discoveries are made in the east, he said.

Trans Mountain sticks to Edmonton route

VANCOUVER (CP) — Trans Mountain Line Co. Ltd. has notified the National Energy Board it intends to proceed with its application to construct a pipeline from a West Coast oil terminal to Edmonton, the company announced Thursday.

Early in 1979, the company filed application for an oil port and pipeline project to ship Alaskan oil to Edmonton through a 75-centimetre diameter pipeline parallel to Trans Mountain's existing 60-centimetre line.

The company said the system would supply refineries in the north-central United States via the existing pipeline transportation network originating in Edmonton and would give Canada's West Coast access to world supplies of crude oil.

Trans Mountain filed the proposal with the National Energy Board in Canada and with agencies having jurisdiction in the U.S.

The board has asked the company to study the effect increased oil tanker traffic would have on the British Columbia coast.

Pending the results of the study the board will decide whether to order a rehearing of the company's application.

The board ruled in public hearings last October and November that there must be adequate supplies of crude oil available to the pipeline to make the project feasible.

The company announcement said sufficient markets exist to justify building the line.

Schools failing on computers?

VANCOUVER (CP) — Public schools and politicians are ill-equipped to understand computers and the changes they will bring to society, Pat McGeer, minister of universities, science and communications, said Thursday.

McGeer told the Canadian Conference on Instructional Technology that technological change is more powerful than any political force and that the B.C. school system has not paid sufficient attention to this change.

"During the 1940s and 1950s chemistry was the glamor world for scientists," he told about 300 teachers, administrators and scientists. "Now the big growth area is in electronics and telecommunications."

Scientific studies in public schools are not matching technological growth, said McGeer, adding that the Science Council of Canada is concerned that "we are raising a generation of scientific illiterates."

Sales tax to remain for Indians

VANCOUVER (CP) — B.C. Indians will have to continue paying sales taxes on their gas and electricity bills until eligibility for exemptions from the tax is determined, say spokesmen for B.C. Hydro and the provincial finance ministry. Hydro is distributing more than 20,000 Social Services Tax exemption forms which will lead to status Indians living on reservations not having to pay the tax on their Hydro bills.

Kaiser workers accept offer

SPARWOOD (CP) — Workers at the Kaiser Resources Ltd. coal mine here have voted 56 per cent in favor of a new contract, a spokesman for the United Mine Workers of America said Thursday. The 1,500 workers have been on strike at the southeastern British Columbia mine since Jan. 3. The new contract provides a wage increase of 27 per cent over two years.

Sex bias charge claimed unfair

VANCOUVER (CP) — A charge of sex discrimination against the engineering faculty at the University of British Columbia is unfounded and unjust, UBC officials and students said Thursday. The complaint to the B.C. Human Rights Branch came from five Vancouver women's groups which charge that "continuing pornographic and sexist publications and activities of the Engineering Undergraduates Society (EUS) discourage women from entering the engineering department."

B.C. Tel names new president

BURNABY (CP) — Jack Carlile has been named president and chief operating officer of British Columbia Telephone Co., effective March 1, B.C. Tel announced Thursday. Carlile, 58, has been vice-president in charge of operations since early 1976. Carlile will be responsible for the B.C. Tel network and customer service departments, as well as for administration, marketing, revenue requirements, transportation and buildings.

McKitka raps bugs by RCMP

NEW WESTMINSTER (CP) — Former Surrey mayor Ed McKitka ended four days on the witness stand in B.C. Supreme Court Thursday with a condemnation of wiretapping and the RCMP.

Thirty-six telephone conversations, secretly recorded by the RCMP in 1977, were introduced as evidence at McKitka's trial on nine criminal charges, including breach of trust and demanding a benefit.

"If those monsters here had done their job accurately, it would show what I had done was in the best interests of the municipality," said McKitka, glancing at RCMP officers in the courtroom.

McKitka, who is alleged to have disclosed confidential information to a land developer, said he tried during his term as mayor from 1975 to 1977 to let the public in general and developers in particular know the municipality's zoning plans.

He is accused of demanding $100,000 from Ray Loewen, a land developer and former Social Credit MLA, in return for helping to get a Loewen Development Corp. project approved by municipal council.

McMitka claimed Thursday the administration that succeeded his in 1978 gave Loewen favorable treatment. He said the council headed by Bill Vogel proposed to let Loewen borrow up to $1 million for off-site construction work through a district improvement bylaw rather than have him pay an impost fee up front.

Forward and back

The freedom of the press in Canada was both furthered and set back by two unrelated events this month, although both involved, at least indirectly, Chief Justice Nathan Nemetz.

The B.C. Court of Appeal overturned a B.C. Supreme Court ruling that then provincial human resources minister Bill Vander Zalm was libelled by a political cartoon. The cartoon, penned by Bob Bierman, and carried in the Victoria Times, depicted the minister pulling the wings off a fly.

An earlier decision handed down by B.C. Supreme Court Justice F. Craig Munroe had disallowed the newspaper's defense of fair comment. However, it was the unanimous ruling of Chief Justice Nemetz and four other Appeals Court justices that the cartoon was fair comment on a matter of public interest.

The criteria for a defence of fair comment are that the matter is indeed of public interest, that the comment was the honest view of the author and that it was presented without a malicious intent. Without the defence of fair comment, a newspaper would be extremely limited in its job of presenting a free flow of ideas and opinions.

It was this limitation that provincial attorney-generals were moved last year to agree to amend provincial Libel and Slander acts so newspapers could apply the defence of fair comment to letters to the editor. These amendments, already in place in Ontario but not yet in B.C., will allow letters to the editor to be judged by these same criteria without the publisher of the paper necessarily sharing the view of the letter-writer.

Ontario attorney-general Roy McMurtry said the amendments were introduced for one key reason — to strengthen freedom of speech and to encourage the free discussion of matters of public concern.

The B.C. Appeals Court ruling on political cartooning strengthens the same freedom.

Another, more precarious but fundamental requirement of a free press is that it not be used as an investigative tool for the state. Chief Justice Nemetz, while the chief justice of the B.C. Supreme Court, gave credence to that notion when he ruled that combines investigative officers had abused the process of the court by applying for warrants to search the Vancouver Sun and Province newsrooms without establishing they had exhausted other methods of obtaining evidence.

The chief justice said the justice of the peace who issued the warrants should have satisfied himself first that the officers took all possible steps to obtain the information they were seeking from an alternative source.

Two weeks ago RCMP officers, with a search warrant issued by a Prince Rupert justice of the peace, searched the CBC Radio newsroom in Vancouver looking for tapes and files.

There is no indication that the Nemetz test for granting warrants to search media newsrooms was applied by either the Prince Rupert JP or the investigating officers. And because of it, freedom of the press was threatened.

Interest on taxes

Municipal Affairs Minister Bill Vander Zalm makes good sense when he talks about the interest rates municipalities may charge on overdue taxes being tied to the going bank interest rates.

At the moment, the Municipal Act prohibits municipalities from charging more than 10 per cent per year interest on overdue taxes. One suspects that this particular clause of the rather ancient act was written when the prime bank interest rate was four or five per cent.

In current economic times, however, the restriction is ridiculous. It means that anyone who has not the ready cash to pay his property taxes — or who wants to use the ready cash for some other project for which he would otherwise have to borrow money — is better off letting them slide.

A company with large land holdings can save a fair amount of money by deferring its taxes at a 10 per cent interest rate rather than borrowing from the bank at 15 per cent or more. The city in effect ends up as a source of relatively low interest loans to businesses and taxpayers who have figured out the system. Meanwhile, the other city taxpayers are having to carry a greater share of the load — especially if the city has to take out short-term bank loans to cover its payments until the taxes come in.

It makes far more sense to tie the rate more closely to the prime bank figure.

RICHARD GWYN

Calm before distant storm

OTTAWA — Something interesting happened the other day. Or, rather, nothing happened, and this was even more interesting.

First, Statistics Canada reported that during the last three months of 1979, the net profits of Canadian industrial corporations soared by 33 per cent, to a record $5.7 billion.

Imagine the peal of protests such news would have provoked a year or two ago. This time, silence. No-one shouted "rip-off" or "unconscionable profit", or demanded that governments do something about it.

Outrage gone

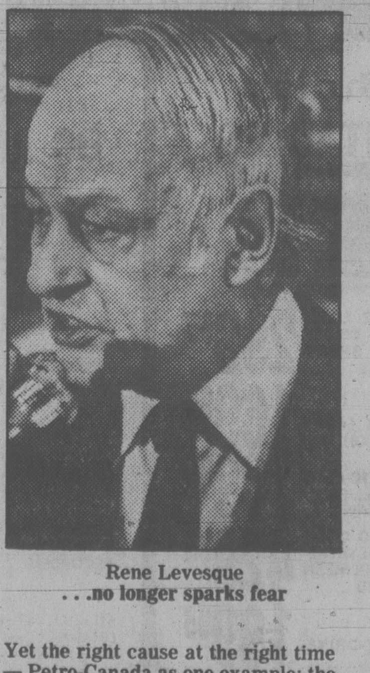
Our collective temper seems to have cooled. In our relations toward each other — French toward English, labor towards management, the public towards government, even, despite some hyped-up post-election headlines, West towards East — the differences remain, but the antangonisms seem to have been leached out of them. We've become more equable, almost tranquil.

Another illustration of the same phenomenon. Until six months or so ago, bureaucrat-bashing was our second favorite indoor sport. We were just about ready to march on Ottawa and to level it stone by stone. Yet the Gallup Poll last week reported that only 29 per cent of Canadians now dest Big Government compared to 37 per cent a year ago.

A last illustration. Not counting the minor detail that in May we heaved Pierre Trudeau out and that this time we heaved him back in again, one striking difference between last week's election and last spring's was that this campaign, unlike that of 1979, was free of the cacaphony of special-interest groups for capital punishment, against gun control, for and against abortion. The issues still are unresolved, yet this time no-one could work up enough anger to shout about them or to be shouted at.

It's tempting to suggest that we drained the venom out of our political system by defeating Trudeau last May. No doubt there's a nodule of truth to this explanation. But it imputes too much influence to a single individual. Anyway, French-English relations had cooled long before Trudeaus defeat: Quebecers demonstrated their acquired self-confidence in the good faith of the rest of the country by the way they reacted to the down-going of their champion, Trudeau, neither with bitterness nor with alarm.

The Me Generation slogan provides another handy all-purpose explanation. We're too interested in ourselves, goes the analysis, to be interested in any other-directed causes. Indeed, feminism, economic nationalism, consumerism, environmentalism, all have lost momentum.



Rene Levesque
. . .no longer sparks fear

Yet the right cause at the right time — Petro-Canada as one example; the response last summer to the plight of the "boat people" as another — still can mobilize support, or outrage.

So what's going on? At a guess, our condition resembles that of villagers living in the shadow of a volcano who've come to realize that although the monster does explode every now and then, these blow-ups don't happen on the gr)und as terrifyingly as they do in the imagination, or the movies. Each and every explosion, it turns out, isn't Apocalypse Now.

Inflation was our first explosion. It burst upon us in 1975. We panicked. Inflation, we knew, led inevitably to hyper-inflation and then to wheelbarrows, and with these, social disorder, labor-management warfare and economic break-down.

Inflation still is with us. Yet, as the current economic analysis bulletin of the Toronto investment firm, Wood Gundy, remarks, "Rapid inflation has simply not produced the economic and financial disasters that we so widely anticipated." Sadly, because as a consequence, "the political will to combat inflation has begun to diminish." The bulletin adds that, "Attitudes and institutions now are coping very well with double-digit inflation and interest rates."

The second explosion took place on a precise date — Nov. 15, 1976. Into power came the Parti Quebecois. Again, we panicked. We composed angry, anguished, proud, pleading letters to the editor and briefs to the National Unity Task Force, we sent our children to immersion classes and we stopped complaining about the cornflakes boxes.

No fear

The PQ is still in power, but it has become, to the rest of us, an object of interest rather than of fear. We've become savvy enough, and secure enough, to know that a "Yes" vote in the referendum if it happens, doesn't mean Quebecers will have voted to separate, but only that, in advance of negotiating constitutional changes, they will have decided to better their bargaining position by sending us a warning signal.

We've regained our collective poise, therefore, because we've lost our fear of the unknown. During this past half-decade, we've survived the worst; so we know now that we can survive anything.

Although it's un-Canadian to say so in public, we really haven't done too badly instinctively, we know this, and we are tranquil, for the moment. Certainly, compared to what we've been through, the troubles to come — arm-wrestling constitutional change with Claude Ryan, coping with western alienation, curing Ontario's "deindustrialization" — are no more than loud rumbles.

Welcome back

Trudeau proves that "once a leader, always a leader" and that old leaders die, they never fade away; they are leaders until they die, no matter what occupation they turn to, or what fortunes befall them. No matter what he does, for the rest of his days, Trudeau will always have the qualities of a leader.

He is the song more than the singer, but the singer as well. The essence of a Canadian at their best. What it should be like to be a Canadian. And what we wish it was like. What we would all like to be as Canadians. And what we would like Canadians to be like. Contrary to what may appear on the surface — and is widely believed (arrogance, self interest, incompatability etc.) — if you dig deeper you come to realize that the day he stepped down from the leadership, you felt a strangeness — more than just sadness — it was an emptiness, loneliness, uneasiness and a terrible loss — almost like losing your identity and a knowing that something very special and valuable had been taken from you and your country and the way you felt about your country.

I had never felt like a Canadian, nor had any identity with the entire country until after Trudeau came to power. Then his elequence, intellect and passionate committment to ideals, made me feel proud to have him as the highest representative of my country and as an honorable, ethical model to respect and imitate.

This man can truly be called a leader in all meanings of the word and therefore a priceless credit to his country. He is our brightest guiding star. He accomplished his greatest vision — though even he may not know it yet — and that is to make us all feel like Canadians. And I never really understood this until after he decided to leave the spotlight. Welcome back. — Joan Bittorf, 1073 Davie Street.

HMCS Algonquin

If any of your readers are wartime crew members of HMCS Algonquin, would they please write one of the undersigned.

We represent a small group who are intersted in having an Algonquin reunion during the Royal Canadian Naval Association reunion in Halifax July 25, 26 and 27 of this year — Donald R. Langton, 35 Premier Ave. West, Kirkland Lake, Ontario, P2N 2S7, or Harold Newton, 55 Antioch Drive, Islington, Ontario.

A comfort

The South Saanich Farmers Institute commends your paper for carrying the recent series of articles on agriculture on the Saanich Peninsula by Paul Minvielle.

These articles took a great deal of research, and he did an excellent job of pointing out to the public the problems facing agriculture in this area.

It is comforting for farmers to know the local press will take the time and has the interest to bring our problems to the public attention. — Bill McKechnie, Secretary, South Saanich Farmers Institute.

Let them free

I read your article about the Good Shepherd Animal Shelter in need of a miracle and the letters to the editor about it. I visited the shelter myself.

I believe that with the aid of a tractor (or, better yet, a horse and plow) they could grow vegetables that would help support them and add to the health of the community.

The large amount of acreage is ideal for an "animal shelter" but let the animals run free. Fence in the whole property and let the animals out of those terrible cages. The dogs, are supposed to be man's best friend and they are prisoners there!

Why worry about spaying or neutering animals? Give them their rights! It's not up to us to control life (ours or animals'). It's up to God who says "Be fruitful and multiply".

One writer says euthanasia or "put the animals to sleep". Killing them is her answer to being humane. No! Let us live and let live.

I think there would be less disease if the animals were out of cages too and less vet bills as they (the animals) have a sense of what wild plants to eat to make them well.

God bless Mother Cecelia and the others and help them make the shelter a true shelter that helps our animal friends physically and mentally. — Joan Wachtin, Shawnigan Lake.

Poverty line

I strongly urge a movement to impeach James Campbell from his position with the regional board because of his most recent continuation of irresponsible remarks, as was reported in the press on Feb. 21.

The comments attributed to him were a vicious attack on a large and important segment of our community, the senior citizens. Certainly many of our local seniors have managed, through hard work and good management, to maintain a lifestyle above the poverty line. To even suggest maliciously removing any of the few benefits allowed them, as a concession to the fact that they have spent almost a lifetime contributing to the betterment of the society we now enjoy, is wrong in a moral sense. The same holds true for the many seniors in our area who now, due to inflation, live well below the accepted poverty line. For them removal of this benefit is an economic disaster.

His comments will probably be explained away, in an attempt to clear the air, as a method of "bargaining" with provincial Human Resources. This is no excuse. The fear and anger created by such public comment from a supposedly responsible source is as wrong as the act of removing the benefit.

I am not reacting as an angry senior; I am an angry, middle-aged member of a concerned Victoria business community. — Steve Powell, 208—1012 Douglas Street.

No need to pave

Parking problems for students seeking access to education at Camosun College have proliferated with the increase in Camosun's enrollment.

Neighborhoods nearby are adversely affected. Their driveways are blocked, their streets obstructed and their tranquility shattered by cars whose student owners either cannot or will not use Camosun's parking lots. The question arises: Does access to education necessitate the sacrifice of another equally worthy goal, that of neighborhood tranquility?

Most proposals to resolve these conflicting goals involve plans to create more on-campus parking. Such proposals are justified on the assumption that no transportation alternative to continued use of the private automobile exists.

Fortunately such an assumption is unjustified. Victoria's B.C. Hydro bus system serves Camosun College with three bus lines.

Collectively there are 132 departures on the three lines leaving city centre serving Camosun College from 6:20 a.m.-midnight, Monday to Friday. Service such as this is virtually without equal in any other city of Victoria's size in Canada, offering Camosun students an efficient economical and integrated public transportation alternative to the private automobile.

Hudson's Bay Woods need not be sacrificed, paved in the poet's words, to put up a parking lot. Indeed public transportation can simultaneously serve both the goal of access to education and the goal of neighborhood tranquility near Camosun College. And the sooner the recognition the better! — Gentry Hudson, Driver Representative, Local 109, The Amalgamated Transit Union.

Members decide

On behalf of the executive of Local 115 of The Newspaper Guild, I would like to respond to a letter which appeared recently in your paper from Alan D. Hassell. In that letter he stated that he had refused to join The Newspaper Guild because of its "predilection of such unions for voting funds to the CCF/NDP, over the objections of various capitive contributors."

May I take this opportunity to point out that any decisions about the allocation of the union funds are made by an executive who is elected by the membership to their positions.

Dues which this union collects from it's members are used to build up strike funds, fight grievances and arbitrations on behalf of members, administer dental plans, assist with expenses associated with collective bargaining, pay for meeting halls, office rent and overhead and various other day-to-day expenses. I can assure Mr. Hassell the executive takes its responsibilities as trustees of the rank-and-file money very seriously indeed. I suggest that if Mr. Hassell had been better informed, he would not have felt it necessary to resign from the Guild over this issue.

Finally, I am sure Mr. Hassell will agree, that there are an awful lot of people whose employers donate money which has been made for the employer by his employees, to various political parties with whom the employees don't agree! — Patricia Lane, Administrative Officer, Vancouver-New Westminster Newspaper Guild.

No bad example

I understand Canada is considering boycotting the Moscow Olympics because of the Soviet invasion of Afghanistan. How is it that no one suggested boycotting the 1948 London Olympics? At that time the British were hunting down guerrillas in Malaya. Did the British have a greater right to be in Malaya at that time than the Russians have to be in Afghanistan?

Well, you may say, all the empires headed by European powers have now been dissolved, so now we're morally entitled to criticise the greatest imperial power of our time: the Soviet Union.

That reminds me of the words of La Rochefoucauld: "We criticise others when we are no longer capable of setting a bad example."

Powerful countries, like powerful people, perpetually seek to augment their power by whatever means they think they can get away with.

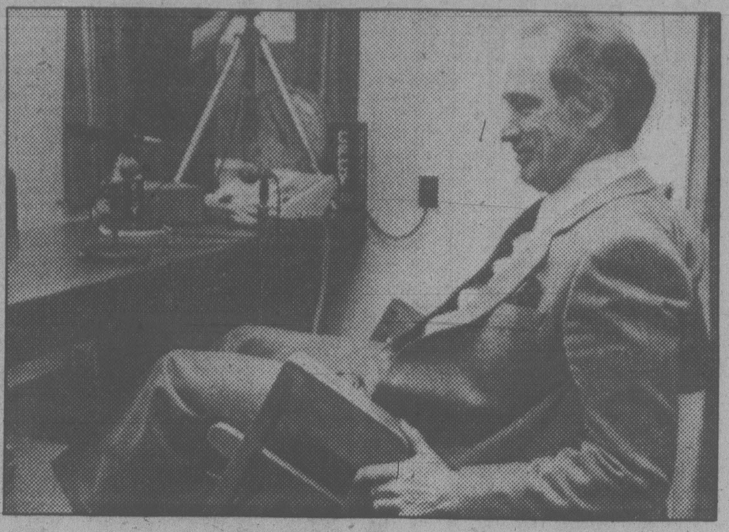
Only force will get the Russians out of Afghanistan: boycotting the Olympics will merely allow us self-righteously and smugly to assert: "We did what we could." — E.R. Freistadt, 340 Foul Bay Road.

Few fat cats

I see Mr. Campbell of the Capital Region Board is getting a lot of miles from his mouth regarding what seniors get. He must have been talking to a few fat cats. Maybe he forgets we have paid our dues to society. Instead of picking on any portion of our society he should put a product on the road that will make it feasible for people to use it. Not the hit and miss situation that exists today. Then it will pay for itself. Don't use somebody's parents as whipping boys. Remember, age creeps up on you faster than you think. From one who knows. — Frank Sarginson, 1101 - 875 North Park Street.

Television kills local candidate

By GEOFFREY STEVENS
The Globe and Mail



'A triumph of image over reality'

It was two days before the election, and Joe Clark was campaigning through some of the small towns north of Montreal. Marcel Masse, one of the Conservatives' star candidates in Quebec, takes times for a quick lunch in a motel restaurant. Mr. Masse, once a senior provincial cabinet minister, is flying his second suicide mission (the first was in 1974) for the Tories in the federal riding of Labelle.

A reporter inquires casually, how is the campaign going? The candidate's reply is vehement:

"How should I know? I'm just a local candidate. I'm irrelevant. The only things that matter are the image of the leader, the national campaign, the national polls, the national issues and the national media coverage. I've always been a consitutency guy, but there's no role for me anymore."

Marcel Masse was dead right.

By some sort of perverse genius, Canadian politics has managed to pick up the worst, most inappropriate aspects of American presidential politics and to marry them to an incompatible parliamentary system. Much of the strength of the parliamentary system is the direct, daily connection between the ministry and the grassroots. A minister is not only responsible to Parliament, he is accountable to his own constituents. He may, if he is the member of a majority government, be able to get bad policies through Parliament. But if his constituents don't like them, or him, he will find himself an unemployed former MP — or, if fortune smiles, a senator.

That's the theory. The practice is quite different. Individual accountability to one's constituents has become largely meaningless. The way Joe Clark walks, or what Pierre Trudeau shouts at a heckler is far more crucial to the election of a local candidate than the campaign the candidate wages, or the work he may have done as an MP.

Obviously an exceptional candidate — a David Crombie or a Michael Wilson in Toronto or Lloyd Axworthy in Winnipeg — can make enough of a difference to withstand a national or regional trend. The average candidate, however, might as well spend the campaign on a beach in Florida for all the difference he makes.

Most MPs won't admit this. They like to think they got elected by dint of hard work or personal appeal. The backroom boys, however, say that the national party, its policies and its organization, count for nearly half of a candidate's support and that leadership or the image of leadership also counts for close to half.

A typical candidate is worth between 3 and 5 per cent — no more. For proof of this proposition one looks no farther than the fate of the entire Social Credit caucus, the most constituency-oriented of all MPs, or the defeat in Prince Edward Island of Secretary of State David MacDonald, who was as good an MP as Ottawa has seen over the past 15 years.

Surely, a local member should be worth more than 3 or 5 per cent in the political equation. Self-interest demands it. If voters don't elect good MPs, they won't get good government.

We may get good government out of the sort of election campaign from which the country has just emerged. But, if we do, it will be the result of blind luck rather than the product of an adequately functioning system.

The election was a triumph of image over reality. Mr. Trudeau did not win it, Mr. Clark lost it. His government made some mistakes, but they were no more serious than, say the mistakes that the first Pearson administration made in 1963 (anyone remember Walter Gordon's first budget?). They were the mistakes one would reasonably expect an inexperienced group of ministers to make upon taking office after 16 years in Opposition.

Mistakes didn't kill Prime Minister Clark, but they did reinforce the image of incompetence and inadequacy. The image was already there in the 1979 election, but Mr. Clark won anyway because Mr. Trudeau's negative image was even stronger. This time, by keeping himself and his campaign under tight control, Mr. Trudeau was able to minimize the negative and to persuade voters — those east of Manitoba, at least — that he was no longer the man they used to love to hate. Mr. Clark had no such luck.

It would be bootless to blame the public for not seeing through the distorted images of the leaders. The responsibility starts with the mass media. The media may not have invented the images, but they nurtured and fed them.

Television is the chief villain. It is both the most compelling, believable medium and the most superficial. Television is the perfect vehicle for reinforcing images, for showing a politician to be what the public has been conditioned to expect him to be. Television is a terrible vehicle for contradicting conventional wisdom, for revealing how a politician really thinks and what he really believes.

Because television is the most powerful medium, all parties geared their election campaigns to exploit it — the Liberals differing from their opponents only in the degree of their success.

It is a truism that television brings individuals and communities closer together, that it breaks down the boundaries of geography, language and race. Its impact on the Vietnam war was enormous because, for the first time in history, it brought war and death — Vietnamese deaths, American deaths — in gory color into the living rooms of the American people.

But when ideas, not physical action, are in conflict, television can have the opposite effect. It can set people farther apart. Thanks to television, more voters today are exposed to political leaders. But the leader on the television screen is more remote than leaders used to be when they stood on the back platform of a train or walked down Main Street, shaking hands, chatting, and chucking babies under the chin.

Canadians have less opportunity to see a leader in person, to touch him, talk to him, question him, appraise his demeanor and assess his credibility — in other words, to form a personal impression.

Instead, it is the impersonal impression of the television camera and producer — the image — that the voter is left with. Television, and this is both the power and the danger of the medium, seems so believable. The viewer assumes that what he sees on the screen is more reliable, more truthful, than what he reads in the newspaper. He assumes he is hearing and seeing what the politician is actually saying, without passing first through the filter of a reporter and an editor.

It's simply not true. There are more filters in television than in any other mass media. The 30-second clip on television probably came from a 30-minute speech and, in all likelihood, it wasn't the most significant 30-second segment. They were the 30 seconds the television reporter wanted to illustrate the point he, the reporter, was anxious to make in his nightly report.

Most of the time, the viewer doesn't even get 30 seconds of the leader. How many times have you turned on the television and seen a leader talking inaudibly in the background while, in the foreground, the television reporter reads his script, a script he may have written hours before the leader arose to make the speech the reporter is commenting on?

To return to Marcel Masse's point, there is almost no place for a local candidate in a made-for-television national campaign. If a leader comes to his riding, the candidate may (if he's lucky, as Mr. Masse was) get to introduce him to his constituents — but the introduction won't get on television. Most of the time, the candidate's function is to smile, applaud at the right time and stay out of the way of the cameras.

STRAY FEATHERS

Harold Hosford

The dynamic hunter

What a picture . . . a White-crowned Sparrow . . . against a blue February sky . . . in brilliant sunshine . . . the bold, black and white stripes on its head sparkling as fresh and new as spring . . . its beak the gold of clean, new straw . . . if only it would sing, the picture would be complete . . .

As near as I can recall, these were the thoughts that went racing through my head as I watched that sparrow. There was nothing unique about them. They're the kind of things I think about nearly every time my binoculars give me a good, clean look at a bird. But, considering what was soon to intrude on my thoughts about White-crowned Sparrows on a sunny February morning, it is surprising that I can recall the bird at all — let alone the details.

But I do recall them, and mainly because of something that bird did that led me to one of those rare events in a birder's life, an unforgettable encounter with a true rarity.

I'd been watching the sparrow for some time, aware that it was almost as intent on watching me as I was on watching it. But, like any wild living thing — at least one that expects to remain living — it was also aware of much more than just me. Jerking its head, first this way and then that, the White-crown was keeping a running inventory of everything going on around it, at the same time making the decisions for appropriate action in response to what it saw.

For the most part I ignored those head movements; they were obviously aimed at objects and events beyond my awareness. But when the bird cocked its head to one side and peered intently at the sky, I responded — and looked in the same direction. In my case, I was looking almost directly into the sun. The bird was too, but it had obviously seen something I didn't, because when I looked back it was to catch a brief glimpse of the sparrow as it sought cover in the bushes.

Looking back to the sky again, I caught sight of a large dark form bearing out of the sun.

It looked vaguely like a Cooper's Hawk — certainly enough to drive a White-crowned Sparrow to cover — but there were things I could see — even in the bird's silhouette — that told me this might not be a Cooper's Hawk.

First, I was struck by the fact that, even though it flapped and glided like a Cooper's Hawk, its wings were longer and more pointed. Then I noticed what I thought was its shorter, wider tail. And it seemed — even in silhouette — a paler bird than I'd expect any Cooper's Hawk to be.

As I was working these thoughts through my computer, the angle between me, the bird and the sun was rapidly changing in my favor. Soon I found myself between the bird and the sun. Suddenly all my suspicions about its identity disappeared. This was no Cooper's Hawk. This was one of those great hunters from the high arctic that occasionally wander to our latitudes in winter — a Gyrfalcon.

Now you can count my encounters with Gyrfalcons on the fingers of one hand — and have a couple of fingers to spare — so you may be able to appreciate my excitement. Fortunately, unlike my other encounters with Gyrfalcons, this one lasted long enough for me to come away satisfied that, for once, I could say more than just, "I saw a Gyrfalcon."

For several minutes the great bird coursed back and forth over the flooded fields — always near enough to be easily seen. He put up one flock of Pigeon but, finding nothing to his liking, veered off in search of more productive pastures. Once he stooped, playfully, on a singing Skylark. Once he cut out after a crow that was saved by a convenient aspen bluff. And once he, in what seemed to me an exercise of sheer, explosive energy, dashed at low-level almost a mile across the fields.

It was a display of the kind of power that sets the Gyrfalcon apart from its better-known relative, the Peregrine, the kind of power that enables a Gyrfalcon to simply out-fly its prey.

And, thanks to a White-crowned Sparrow, I had a ringside seat to it all.

A quest for the new

By JILL TWEEDIE
Manchester Guardian

However bleak the immediate prospect of the 1980s looks — and if looks could kill, we'd all be halfway into rigor mortis — I cannot but feel a frisson of excitement at the thought that we face not only a new year but a whole new decade, virgin territory stretching ahead into a mysterious distance, seductive as the yellow brick road to Oz and signposted to those most magical lands Future and Change, where there is no trace of the black of what was or the grey of what is but only the clear blue of what might be.

Until quite recently, I was unaware that there were those who did not share my preoccupation with change. I assumed that everyone set themselves constant aims and projects, as I do, and if I could see that they weren't, I imagined them depressed in some way, as I frequently am myself, and set about cheering them up with little hopeful nuggets for the future like "It'll soon be spring" or "you could dye your hair red" or "why not get a new job or have a baby or something."

But now I realize that a whole section of the human race does not see life in terms of a winding road ahead or even an uphill climb. They are, instead, residents of the horizontal, people who wish to preserve things much as they are, balancers who want equilibrium, who stand up in the middle of the see-saw trying to keep it still instead of bumping up and down at the other end as do those obsessed with the vertical view of life. Dimly I perceive that they could be luckier than me but since it is almost impossible to enter into and appreciate the tenuous inner climate of other lives, I cannot know.

Inside my head and the heads of those like me, there is a more or less continuous peering about for the next milestone. It is difficult for us to conceive of happiness in stasis. Indeed, happiness is squeezed into the bits just after one event and just before another, the longueurs in between being endurable only because of the constant hope that the next goal, target, project, drama is round the corner. So we look anxiously forward. Forward to leaving school, getting a new job, finding a new friend, getting married, having a child, and another child, moving house, moving countries, being promoted, changing jobs, changing.

What's new, we ask? What's next? What plans to make, places to go, people to meet, ambitions to fulfil, ideas to turn into reality? We are always involved in musts. Must lose weight, learn Russian, study Persian miniatures. Must move to the country, move into town, be nicer or nastier to the children, join clubs, write books, get psycho-analyzed, go to America, do the football pools, do anything as long as it's something we haven't done before. We are outstandingly bad at having time off because the point of relaxation is having nothing happening and nothing happening is our idea of hell.

A lot of us are also outstandingly bad at being middle-aged because that, above all, is the time society tries to organize us into stasis, hedging us round with dwindling job prospects, barriers to immigration, children taking mock and real exams, insurance premiums and a million other things that threaten us with horrid stability.

Inside other heads, so I am told, there is nothing remotely resembling this turmoil of movement. The eyes contemplate the land around instead of being fixed on green pastures ahead. A man I know, for instance, tells me he is happy. Why? Because he has all he could reasonably want. A comfortable home, a comfortable wife, healthy children, a good enough job, money to pay the bills. Yes, yes, I said crossly, so do I but what do you want in the future? What's your next step, where do you plan to go? Nowhere, he said. I just want more of the same.

More of the same? The thought makes my mind reel. To look into the future and see that it holds exactly what I have today and is exactly where I am today, however much I like it, sets up a nasty tremor somewhere inside, a shiver that runs through my very neutrons, as if they were suddenly starved of some essential element. Oddly, the idea presents itself to me as almost immoral, a kind of vice, an unforgivable laziness or decadence, a retreat, an end. In my view if some doors close others must be opened, forcibly kicked open if necessary. How do you mark time in a cage?

If all this sounds as if I had placed a value on vertical living over horizontal, it is not what I intended. I am aware that my way of life sounds frenetic and it often is. I am also aware that those who wish to stay much as they are have the edge over me in most philosophies. I realize that neither state need be better or worse than the other. Vertical people can be grasping achievers, overambitious, greedy, but many want nothing much in a material sense — they simply find it hard to exist without an idea of change, even change for the worse, for the obviously disastrous. And horizontal people are necessarily contented with what they have — they merely prefer the devil they know, where we would pick the devil we don't.

Who has the best of it? I imagine the horizontal people do, but then, I would. I cannot imagine how it must be to contemplate the ground under your feet rather than crick your neck straining to see into the middle distance. How do you feel at the end of day if that day has not been spent ticking off something or other as "done" or at the very least, "started". How do horizontal people view 1980 without setting up a series of notches ahead, with themselves at the end, transformed? How do you train yourself to see time as all around you instead of carefully separated into Past, Present and Future? How do you know where you are, who you are, without at least putting up hypothetical milestones? I wish some horizontal person would tell me.

Meanwhile, back at the ranch, I cope as best I can, sometimes reverting even to fairy tales when stasis looms too threateningly. Go on, I say to patient friends or husband. Tell me what we're going to do in the spring, the summer, the autumn of 1980. Tell me a story. We'll give up smoking, we'll change jobs, we might go to Afghanistan or Cape Cod, we'll phone all the people we've always wanted to know better and ask them to dinner, we'll write a play. You could change all the furniture around, you could become a Special Constable or take singing lessons or move to San Francisco or sculpt or start a whole new career running a seaside boarding house or be a born-again housewife

New York

Stock prices turned upward today in a mild technical rally from the declines of the past 2½ weeks.

In the news, the U.S. government reported that the index of leading economic indicators dropped 0.7 per cent in January, for its fourth straight monthly decline.

Analysts saw that as a tentative signal that some slowing of the economy was in the offing, although the experts are still widely divided about the chances of a recession and its prospective timing.

Several large banks, meanwhile, raised their prime lending rates to a record 16¾ per cent. The increase in the basic charge on blue chip loans had been expected in view of recent rises in other interest rates.

London

The London stock market fell moderately near the close of light trading today.

The Financial Times index was down 1 to 468.1.

Industrials were mixed, oils firmed and banks and golds declined.

Bonds

TORONTO (CP) — Prices were sharply higher in active trading on the Canadian bond market Thursday. The short end of the market rose one-half point. Mid-, long-term, provincial and corporates gained two points. Day-to-day money was available at 12½ per cent. Analysts said dealers are still short and accounts were not willing to sell. Strong rumours of credit control in the United States added to the strength.

Transmissions were due to start again Thursday after engineers working for the past two days found ways to bypass the damaged compressor station.

Dome

Dome Petroleum Ltd. reports net income after provision for deferred income taxes for 1979 of $181,711,000 or $3.90 a common share, compared with $125,132,000 or $2.79 a common share in 1978.

Dome said revenue for 1979 amounted to $945,466,000 compared with $627,320,000 in the previous year. Cash flow increased to $323,395,000 compared with $198,741,000 in 1978.

Net income before deferred income taxes amounted to $277,591,000, compared with $172,599,000 in 1978.

Dome spent about $875 million on exploration, development and production facilities in 1979 — almost three times its 1979 cash flow.

Company operations included 351 exploratory and 448 development wells. Exploraty drilling increased 46 per cent over 1978 and resulted in the completion of 74 oil wells and 144 gas wells for a 62-per-cent success ratio.

PWA

Pacific Western Airlines Ltd. reports a net profit for 1979 of $12,796,000 compared with $8,447,000 in 1978.

Net earnings per common share were $4.62 compared with $3.24 in 1978.

Operating revenues increased to $202,828,000 from $173,106,000 in 1978. Revenue of $156,915,000 was derived from mainline operations by the regional carrier and $41,078,000 from charter operations. Other income amounted to $4,835,000.

Operating expenses were $189,105,000 compared with $160,949,000 in 1978.

Alcan

Alcan Aluminium Ltd. reports net income of U.S. $427 million or $10.57 a share for 1979, compared with U.S. $297 million and $7.34 a share the previous year.

Alcan's annual report says the company expects to spend about U.S. $600 million in capital installations in 1980 — about 20 per cent higher than in 1979.

Almost half of 1979's capital expenditures were by Alcan's main subsidiary, Aluminum Company of Canada, Ltd., mainly on the new Grande Baie smelter in Quebec's Saguenay region and on other North American projects, the report says.

As in 1978, the Canadian subsidiary provided more than half of Alcan's net income, U.S. $230 million, despite strikes at three of its five smelters.

Over the four years 1979-82, Alcan expects to add to its smelting capacity at an average annual rate of 5.5 per cent, slightly higher than the expected four to five per cent expected growth in demand.

The Canadian-based multinational now reports a majority — 53.3 per cent — of its shares registered in the U.S., with Canada accounting for 38.6 per cent and other countries 8.1 per cent.

Last year's figures were 45 per cent of shares registered in the U.S., 42.5 per cent in Canada and 12.5 per cent elsewhere.

Lornex

Lornex Mining Corp. Ltd. reports net earnings for the calendar year 1979 of $57,569,000 or $6.96 a share compared with $14,354,000 of $1.74 a share in 1978.

The increase was primarily due to higher prices for molybdenum and copper, including higher foreign exchange gains, and new molybdenum sales agreements with favorable terms effective July 1, 1979. Copper production was virtually unchanged and molybdenum production was up 11 per cent over the previous year.

AGTL

Alberta Gas Trunk Line Co. Ltd. has reported a profit of $116,398,000 for the year ended Dec. 31, 1979, a 36-percent increase over 1978.

The company earned $85,631,000 in 1978 on operating revenues of $464,131,000. Operating revenues in 1979 were $1,243,972,000.

The major factor in the large increase in operating revenues is the consolidation of Husky Oil Ltd. accounts from July 1, 1979, the company said.

Basic earnings per common share were $2.97 in 1979 compared with $2.31 in 1978, the company said.

Total consolidated assets increase to just over $3.1 billion in 1979 compared with $2.1 billion in 1978.

Loblaws

Loblaw Companies Ltd. reports net earnings of $22.8 million or 58 cents a share in 1979, compared with $18.6 million or 50 cents the previous year.

Sales totalled $4.7 billion compared with $4.2 billion.

The earnings figures do not inilude extraordinary items of $12 million in 1979 or $6.8 million the previous year.

The 1979 extraordinary items consisted of $4.1 million profit from the sale of Dickson's Food Services Ltd. and tax reductions realized on the application of prior years' losses of $7.9 million.

In 1978, an extraordinary item of $6.8 million was realized from tax reductions.

An interim financial report to shareholders says capital expenditures totalled a record $115 million last year, including three acquisitions made in the fourth quarter for $8 million.

CLUES ACROSS

1. SOCKS not sacks. SOCKS, rather than sacks, have a definite mode of usage providing a basis for what "it's reasonable to expect."
4. LOCKET not locked. The clue's word "treasured" (rather than "valuable") suggests something of sentimental rather than intrinsic value, in which connection LOCKET is more apt than locked. Locker is not very apt.
7. RESTING not rusting. One thinks of "a new lease of life" as following a time of being supposedly finished, and lying unused, without any particular reference to rusting. Also, it is a usable or repairable car (hardly one that has been rusting for decades) that "may receive a new lease of life."
10. SETTEE not setter. A setter takes its value from its pedigree, etc., rather than from its handsomeness. One doesn't usually buy an adult dog, anyway.
13. DANK not dark. DANK and (also) gloomy, yes; but "dark" alone is so similar to gloomy, it's pointless to say "dark and gloomy."
16. GET not set. With reference to a journey, "set out" is a self-contained phrase. The clue's wording: "—out on the road" has more the air of being to accommodate "GET."
18. RAVEN not haven. "Haven" has a somewhat poetic ring but is vague. In practical terms, one would speak of photographing a port or harbor, say. RAVEN is all the more apt for being a difficult subject.
21. RECENT not decent. RECENT is the more pointed answer. From a star, all records are at least decent anyway.
22. NICE not nine. "NICE points," requiring fine discrimination, etc., are hard to put over in a few words. In this context, "nine" is unsuitably specific. Why imagine that a speaker may have nine points he would make if he could?
23. SLY not shy or spy. The clue seems to regard this as a bad thing to be, so SLY is more apt than shy. The question of growing up to be a spy seems too odd or remote.

CLUES DOWN

1. STRUGGLING not straggling. "Even worse progress" implies that they are making bad progress anyway; this theme of difficulty links up better with STRUGGLING.
3. SLIP not skip. Since one is said simply to "skip town," the clue's phrase " out of town" suits SLIP better.
4. LEGS not logs. After all, the logs handled by lumbermen are very durable. The dangers which threaten the men's LEGS in such heavy work, however, are obvious.
5. COATS not costs. Undesirably heavy COATS can "seem" too burdensome, but heavy costs can be financially crippling in a real sense.
6. EXTENSIVE not expensive. Nobody relishes extended sessions in the dentist's chair, even though one may be wealthy enough for the expense not to matter.
11. NAVE not name. If a church is simply called "St. Mary's" or the like, its name will be the same as many another. One NAVE "may well resemble" that of many others, of course.
15. BRAINY not brawny. There is some point in remarking that a BRAINY, intellectual type may possibly not have all that much "common" sense, but there is no particular connection between brawn and sense.

Major B.C. quake possible this decade, expert warns

Southwestern B.C. is due for an earthquake this decade and seismologists say it could be a big one.

"We should have one about once every decade and large enough to be potentially destructive," says Garry Rogers, presiding seismologist at the Pacific Geoscience Centre in Victoria.

When and if an earthquake does occur, seismologists say it won't be related to the notorious San Andreas fault, which causes quakes in California.

"We usually get quite a few calls after there has been an earthquake in California," said Rogers. "People have the notion that the San Andreas fault runs right up the West Coast."

But the San Andreas cuts east from the Pacific into the California coast and has no impact this far north.

The problem, said Rogers, is the Juan de Fuca plate, which lies under Vancouver Island.

Rogers, currently working on a PhD in seismology, is considered a B.C. earthquakes expert.

He and his colleagues have studied major and minor tremors numbering in the hundreds throughout the years and say it is probable there will be one in the six to seven Richter range sometime this decade.

Rogers bases his dismal prediction on records of violent seismic activity for more than 30 years in the Puget Sound-Vancouver Island region, which lies above the Juan de Fuca plate.

The Vancouver Island-Lower Mainland regions have had some impressive shakers over the years.

A tremor registering 7.3 on the Richter scale hit central Vancouver Island in 1946 and in 1949 a shock in the Puget Sound area measured seven. There were no deaths in either case.

In 1965, a 6.5 tremor centred under Seattle killed three persons and caused $12 million damage.

Earthquakes are measured on the Richter scale in order of severity from one to 10, with increases in multiples of 10. A shock measuring eight is 10 times as severe as one of seven, or 100 times as violent as a six.

Tremors up to four aren't normally noticed except on seismographs or by people living right at the centre; a five rattles dishes and windows; a six cracks plaster walls and anything beyond six is increasingly destructive.

It was an 8.5 quake that levelled parts of Anchorage, Alaska, in 1964 and caused a tidal wave across the North Pacific.

‘New left’ names spread

Goyer denies he knew

By KITTY McKINSEY

OTTAWA (CP) — Former Liberal solicitor-general Jean-Pierre Goyer says he did not know the RCMP sent the names of about 100 Canadians, allegedly sympathetic with revolutionary causes, to four foreign intelligence agencies in 1971.

Goyer told the federal royal commission investigating alleged RCMP wrongdoing he was very surprised to learn years later that an unidentified RCMP sergeant sent out copies of a preliminary security service report on threats from "the new left."

He said the officer used bad judgment in circulating copies of the document from which Goyer compiled his "black list" of public servants who allegedly called themselves part of the extra-parliamentary opposition (EPO).

Testimony about the controversial list was given before the commission in 1978 and 1979. A heavily-edited transcript of the evidence was made public Thursday.

If he had been asked, Goyer said he would have told the security service not to divulge to foreigners the names of Canadians whose loyalty was suspect. But he said it was routine for Canada to exchange information on international security threats with friendly countries.

The names of the countries which received the security service report — marked For Canadian Eyes Only when it was sent to Goyer — were deleted from the public version of the transcript.

The Netherlands appeared to be one of the countries. Commissioner Donald Rickerd said at one point he was trying "to grapple with the problem of what the Dutch would do with these two names (of Canadians)."

Goyer said the Privy Council office asked the security service in 1971 to investigate leaks of information from the public service.

The force responded with a 32-page report on "true revolutionaries" — including 21 public servants — who, it said, wanted to destroy existing social and political structures in Canada.

Goyer said he wanted to show the report to fellow cabinet ministers but John Starnes, then head of the security service, argued against this.

Starnes testified the security service considered its report preliminary and inconclusive.

Instead, Goyer sent the list of 21 public servants named in the report to five other cabinet ministers, urging them to remind the suspects of their duties to keep government information confidential.

Goyer said he wanted to be careful not to damage the reputations of people who were only under suspicion but who were not accused of any crime.

He said if he had it to do over again, he would still circulate the list. He said he had no malice toward any of the 21 people named, some of whom have sued him for libel because of the list.

Gilbert said there was a question whether Goyer circulating the list "constituted unjust discrimination against these people or whether it represented a diligent administrative action."

Rickerd said he was worried that the names of innocent Canadian might get into foreign intelligence files or computer banks. Neither Goyer nor RCMP witnesses knew how the foreign agencies used the names.

Rickerd said there was no way for a foreigner to tell whether the people mentioned in the report were suspected of being revolutionaries or whether they were accidentally lumped in through hearsay.

"They were all tarred with the same brush," he said.

The report was sent to foreign agencies with a letter apparently signed by Starnes's deputy, L.R. Parent. But other evidence showed an unknown sergeant in fact made the decision to disseminate the report and signed Parent's name on the letter.

The first time the government learned foreign countries had the report was in April, 1978, or 1979 when then solicitor-general Jean-Jacques Blais was told, evidence showed.

Goyer said he concluded that circulating his list nipped the EPO in the bud because there was no revolution during the early 1970s.

Open trial urged

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim has asked Poland to admit a UN observer to the trial in Warsaw next week of Alicja Wesolowska, a Polish employee of the UN jailed since last August, a UN spokesman announced.

Tory seats firmed

OTTAWA (CP) — Outgoing Public Works Minister Erik Neilsen saw his margin over Liberal Ione Christensen in Yukon constituency increased Thursday.

An official addition of ballots cast in the riding for the Feb. 18 federal election put Neilsen's lead at 101 votes. Election-night returns had given the public works minister an edge of only 29 votes.

Gordon Ashworth, national director of the Liberal party, said it may be another day or so before the party decides whether to seek a judicial recount of the ballots.

Meanwhile, a recount in the Ontario riding of Haldimand-Norfolk has confimed the victory of Progressive Conservative Bud Bradley.

Returning officer George Pond said the recount gave Bradley 139 more votes than his Liberal challenger Art Renn. Election-night figures showed Bradley in the lead by 74 votes.

Planets drawing nearer

The two bright objects close together in the night sky this week are Mars and Jupiter, two planets which are nearing a conjunction — or point of apparent closest approach — this weekend.

Astronomers say the moment of conjunction will be about 11 a.m. Sunday, when the two will be separated by an angle of only 3 degrees in the sky. For comparison, the disk of the moon is one-half degree wide.

But the conjunction doesn't mean that Mars and Jupiter are actually getting nearer each other, only that they appear that way from earth.

Extortion charged union boss

MONTREAL (CP) — Andre (Dede) Desjardins, onetime boss of Quebec's construction unions, has been charged with extorting more than $400,000 from a dozen building firms in the early 1970s.

Documents filed Thursday in sessions court in Montreal allege that Desjardins and a colleague, Renald Bertrand, intimidated the companies into contributing sums of money to members of the international plumbers' union he once headed and to its sports association between 1970 and 1975.

Desjardins quit five years ago as director of the Quebec Building Trades Council, the bargaining agent for the province's 100,000 construction workers, after coming under fire at a provincial inquiry into violence and racketeering in the construction industry.

Bogus MD left love letter

PORT HARDY (CP) — A bogus doctor who killed himself after being discovered by officials scribbled a note of love to his wife on the front page of a medical text as his last message to the world, a inquest into his death was told Wednesday.

The text, the only book Louis Trujillo had in his police cell, dealt with how to pass medical-school examinations.

Trujillo had posed as Dr. Robert Rifleman for two months in the village of Alert Bay, near this northern Vancouver Island community.

The inquest was told that he used his finger and a cup of coffee to scrawl a goodbye message to his wife before taking his own life Jan. 26.

The inquest was told he broke his glasses and used a shard of glass to slit his wrists and throat. He died from loss of blood.

The jury found the death unnatural and suicidal and recommended that prisoners be allowed to use personal effects "deemed even remotely dangerous" only under supervision.

Before he died he was interviewed by Constable David White of ALert Bay RCMP.

"I would like to say at this time that all that has transpired was through my own poor judgment," Trujillo wrote in a statement after the interview in which he admitted he had posed as doctors in Mexico, the U.S. and Canada.

"I would like to state that my intentions were not to harm anyone or in any way add to the problems of this community. I only wish that I could undo the terrrible situation which must follow this flow of events," he wrote.

"At this point I wish only that I could somehow alter any harm that I have inflicted on these people who treated me so well. My intent was not to make a lot of money. My intent was to help people by doing what I was doing."

Trujillo admitted in his statement that he broke the law and said he was willing to pay the consequences, either deportation or a jail term.

However, he killed himself the day after he was arrested in the Alert Bay hospital fice in which he had practised under the stolen identity.

There is lingering doubt as to the true identity of the man.

Bob Campbell, a local RCMP constable, testified that the Federal Bureau of Investigation matched the fingerprints of 'Dr. Rifleman' with those of 37-year-old Robert Louis Trujillo.

Trujillo, the FBI report said, was born in Albuquerque, N.M., and had a lengthy criminal record.

City woman to Crossroads

A Victoria woman has been elected to the board of directors of Canadian Crossroads International.

Judy Matthews, of 1025 Bay, was a crossroads' overseas volunteer in India in 1974. She is chairman of the crossroads' program, planning and evaluation committee and national coordinator of the organization's Volunteers to Canada program.

Crossroads is a volunteer, non-profit organization encouraging international understanding and cooperation through its 96 chapters

Extra MPs a mistake

Premier Bill Bennett says he opposes a proposal for a partial system of proportional representation by adding 50 seats to the House of Commons.

The additional seats were proposed by national NDP leader Ed Broadbent to give political parties representatives in areas where they were shut out in the Feb. 18 federal general election.

"It would provide members only accountable to a political party and not to a specific constituency, and as such it would be an aberration of what is a very noble political system — the British Parliamentary system," Bennett told a news conference.

"I trust the political system we have, and I believe the people correct the system from time to time and no single event or election should cause people to look for ways to destroy it."

Bennett said he does not object to senators being appointed to the federal cabinet as long as they have had previous experience as elected representatives.

He said his government was pleased to have worked with Senator Ray Perrault in the previous Liberal administration.

Concert drug push charged

UNIONDALE, L.I. (UPI) — Ten people attending a concert by the Pink Floyd rock group weren't just there to hear the group perform its hit song, Money. Police say they were there to make money selling drugs.

A London, Ont. man was among those arrested.

A police spokesman said Thursday more than $2,000 in drugs seized Wednesday night at the Nassau Coliseum in Uniondale included quantities of cocaine, barbiturates, amphetamines, hashish and marijuana.

Also seized was about $2,000 in what Nassau County police called "drug-related currency."

The spokesman said undercover police officers working in the arena, especially its lavatories, bought the drugs from those arrested.

Two officers were injured, neither seriously, attempting to arrest one of the suspects.

Awards on TV

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — The 15th Annual Academy of Country Music Awards will be telecast by NBC May 1 from the Good Time Theater at Knott's Berry Farm, one of Southern California's oldest tourist attractions.

Dick Clark will produce the show which presents awards in 23 categories voted on by some 2,000 members of the country music academy.

A miniature Bette Davis with big talent for acting

scott's world
by vernon scott

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — The lovely old saying about little girls declares they are made of sugar and spice and everything nice — and that is how pre-teen girl children have been depicted in Hollywood from the very beginning.

Almost without exception every female film and TV tot has had ringlets, dimples or an irresistible cuddlesome quality — or combinations of the three.

Shirley Temple was adorable and could sing and dance. Margaret O'Brien shed heart-breaking tears. Elizabeth Taylor was a china doll; Natalie Wood, a winsome waif. Tatum O'Neal was tartly cute, Brooke Shields an awesome beauty.

In television Melissa Gilbert, of Little House on the Prairie, was a freckled, buck-toothed angel in gingham. Family's Christie McNichol was touchingly vulnerable.

Inevitably, little girl stars with darling smiles and copious tears move audiences to scoop them up for cuddling and cooing.

They shared a touch of glamor, too. All but one. All but Jodie Foster.

Angular, unsmiling Jodie had no curls, few smiles or tears, no dimples, no wide-eyed vulnerability. She was not thought of in endearing terms — moppet, tot or little princess.

Jodie was, at best, a tomboy, defiant, independent, a miniature adult who could and did fend for herself. Her off-screen charm was imperceptible.

When Jodie was nine, she was neither cute nor cuddlesome in the role of Becky Thatcher in Tom Sawyer, a part that shrieks for cuteness.

All Jodie had going for her was remarkable talent. And driving ambition.

At three she was working in commercials. By the time she was 12, in 1976, Jodie had been nominated for best supporting actress in Taxi Driver.

She won two British Academy Awards in 1976-77 for Taxi Driver and Bugsy Malone. She was honored with a pair of Italian awards for the same films.

Jodie won acclaim and other awards for her performance in The Little Girl Who Lived Down the Lane in 1978.

Today, at 17, Jodie may be the best actress, pound-for pound, among us.

Although she weighs considerably less than 100 pounds, Jodie contributes heavyweight performances once again in Foxes, a growing-up teen-age high school film due for release next month, and in Carny, playing an 18-year-old small town runaway who joins a travelling carnival.

While Jodie doesn't set herself above child stars, current and past, she does draw a clear distinction.

"I'm not a kid star," she said "I never was. I am just an actress.

"The term child star takes on a pejorative connotation. The movie industry likes to put everyone in ruts.

"I'm a professional actress. It would be the same if I had become a lawyer. That's my personality. Since I was three, I felt I was an actress and I've taken it very seriously. So seriously I don't think about it much.

"I've done 16 movies, 50 or 60 commercials and about 30 TV shows. I'm a working actress. Yet if I had to fill out an application asking my occupation, I'd write down student."

Jodie was sitting reluctantly with her mother, Brandy, in the popular Polo Lounge of the Beverly Hills hotel. Celebrity hangouts are not Jodie's style.

Brandy refuses to reveal her daughter's I.Q. but Jodie's vocabulary and quick comprehension lead one to believe she is close to genius.

Jodie attends the Lycee Francaise in Los Angeles, a school in which no language is spoken but French. She has applied and been accepted for enrollment at Princeton, Columbia and the University of California at Berkeley.

She is awaiting word from Harvard and Yale to which she has also applied.

"I want to attend college full time and do my acting work during the summer," Jodie said. "If necessary, I'll take a year off to study. I plan to major in literature and English composition. After that, we'll see."

Jodie brings to mind a miniature Bette Davis off-screen and on — capable, efficient and remote. You suspect her career will match Bette's.

"I don't examine whether my talent is intuitive or learned or a combination of both," she said. "You learn how to charm the camera when you have it all together. Some actors become totally absorbed in scenes. Not me. I'm always aware of what's going on when the camera rolls."

Despite her I.Q., worldliness and travel abroad, Jodie is curiously naive.

Her mother admits she's more sheltered than most 17-year-olds, not forgetting the fact Jodie played a 14-year-old streetwalker in Taxi Driver.

"Jodie sets her own limits and values," Brandy said. "She doesn't take on anything she can't handle. She doesn't buckle under peer pressure and she's not rebellious."

"I have two older sisters and an older brother," Jodie said. "I've seen the mistakes they've made. I've seen it all, but I make my own choices and try to avoid mistakes.

"There's not much difference between kids and adults except experience and responsibility. And I think I've had my share of both."

Woman, 85, girl, hurt in mishaps

A young girl and an 85-year-old woman are in hospital today recovering from injuries received in separate traffic mishaps in Saanich Thursday.

Julie Frances Smith, 8, of 4123 Cabot, is listed in fair condition in Royal Jubilee Hospital with head and internal injuries suffered when she was knocked down and dragged about 10 feet by a B.C. Hydro bus.

The mishap occurred in front of 4343 Tyndall at 3:35 p.m.

Police said the girl, a Grade 3 student at Hillcrest elementary, ran across the road into the path of the bus which was just pulling out of a bus stop.

The bus driver was identified as Frank Pavdy, 56, of 1706 San Juan.

Police said Pavdy's view was partially obscured by another bus parked at a bus stop on the other side of the street.

In the other accident, Florence Stinton of 1488 Dallas Road suffered a possible fractured hip and arm following a two-car collision at Pat Bay and Sayward at 4:12 p.m.

She was reported in fair condition in Victoria General.

Mrs. Stinton, a passenger in a car driven by her husband, Walter, 93, had to be removed from the wreckage by Saanich firemen using their Jaws of Life machine.

Neither Stinton nor the driver of the other car, Joanne Elizabeth Orchard, 26, of 279 Hartland were hurt.

Birthdays rare for babies born today

By PAUL MINVIELLE

It can be tough on a kid who's been around for eight years.

"How old are you?"

"Two."

"Don't try to be a wise guy, kid. Now how old are you?"

"I'm two. I'm just having my second birthday."

Figured it out yet? That's right. Any youngster who looks eight and says he's two must have been born Feb. 29, 1972, and this would be his second birthday.

Brook Schaddelee, of 3915 Bedford Road in Saanich, is one of the few children who was born in Victoria on this day eight years ago.

So how does it feel?

Brook is relishing the attention and he thinks it's kind of neat being different.

And it's probably nice knowing that former Montreal Canadiens star Henri Richard is also celebrating a birthday today — his 11th.

Richard, who quit hockey five years ago after 20 seasons with the Canadiens, drank a toast to his fast-approaching birthday Thursday night at his downtown pub.

He was born in 1936.

In case you've forgotten, the extra day at the end of February is necessary to get our calendar back in step with the earth.

It was the Julian Calendar that figured the year was 365¼ days long.

So they made three years 365 days long and every fourth year 366 days.

Does anyone remember the Venerable Bede? He was a monk who announced in 730 A.D. that the 365¼-day year was 11 minutes 14 seconds too long.

He became venerable just figuring things out.

Well, the world held its breath at the Bede's startling news and a short time later (800 years, to be exact), Pope Gregory XIII fixed everything up by dumping 10 days from the year 1852.

That got rid of those accumulated minutes and seconds.

The rule, as you probably know, is that a leap year is any year that can be divided evenly by four.

But did you know that centesimal years, those ending in 00, are common years and not leap years, unless they're divisible by 400?

Did you care?

The fumbling with dates gave rise to one Irish legend involving St. Patrick and St. Bridget.

It seems the two saints were strolling along a beach in the year 430 when St. Bridget suggested it would be nice if the colleens could propose marriage occasionally.

St. Patrick agreed, and the two saints decided leap year would be an ideal time for the girls to be the chasers instead of the chased.

The legend is interesting, but incredibly, the custom became law in Scotland in 1228.

The law required single women of marriageable age to propose to suitable men in leap year.

Any man refusing was subject to a stiff fine and imprisonment.

Women taking the initiative in romance became a common Leap Year custom around the world, but in today's world, liberated women don't bother waiting to divide by four.

The comic strip L'il Abner was responsible for a Leap Year every year with the introduction of Sadie Hawkins Day.

There are a few Sadie Hawkins dances and special events planned around Victoria but florists report the Prairie madness of the late Fifties and Sixties hasn't survived.

In those days on the Prairies, a male date was wined and dined and coerced into wearing a corsage — and the corsage reached to his ankles, adorned with such goodies as miniature toilet seats, miniature monkeys and rude little messages.

It's a custom that well deserves to be dead.

Herring price turned down by fishermen

VANCOUVER (CP) — Union fishermen meeting here strongly rejected a herring price offer from the Fisheries Association of B.C. Thursday, a spokesman for the United Fishermen and Allied Workers Union said.

The spokesman said the association offered $615 a ton for gillnet-caught herring and $315 a ton for seine-caught herring.

Negotiations were continuing today.

Meanwhile, boats were already heading for the fishing grounds in anticipation of the roe herring season that could start as early as Sunday.

Jerry Spitz, president of the fisheries Association, said the industry increased its offer later Thursday to $624 and $318, roughly half of last year's minimum prices. Spitz said the union had reduced its demands, originally $3,500 a ton for gillnetters and $2,100 for seiners, to $2,050 for gillnetters and about $1,100 or $1,200 for seiners.

The industry says minimum prices must be drastically reduced to win back Japanese consumers who last year boycotted the roe when it reached prices of up to $45 and $55 a pound.

Gillnetter Bruce Stevens said fishermen can't afford to go fishing for the prices offered by the companies. He said price-gouging by Japanese companies should be blamed for the collapse in the market, not the price paid to fishermen on the grounds, which last year was about $12 a pound of roe based on an average price of $3,000 a ton for gillnet-caught herring.

"We're looking at last year's (minimum) prices as a starting point," Stevens said. "We don't even know if that's enough to satisfy the membership."

But Spitz said the Japanese have offered Canadian processors only $5 a pound for the roe this year. He claimed the association's offer to the fishermen leaves the industry with no profit "and it might not even cover the overhead."

He pointed out that the negotiated prices are only minimum standards and that fishermen will see an increase in prices paid on the grounds if the market comes back.

"I just hope they don't back themselves into a corner and get into a strike they don't want," Spitz said. Although 80 per cent of herring fishermen are not UFAWU members, the union could shut down operations of association companies by picketing, he said.

Grits urged to cross party lines on fishing

The new Liberal government should develop a co-operative spirit with B.C. MPs to find solutions to the problems facing the province's fishing industry, Nanaimo-Alberni NDP MP Ted Miller said in Ottawa Thursday.

Miller, the NDP fisheries spokesmen in the last Parliament, said in an interview that co-operating with opposition MPs from the West would help the Liberals who have no MPs from B.C., Alberta and Saskatchewan.

"The Liberals have to address themselves to their lack of representation from the West. It will be a good opportunity for Western MPs to advocate changes."

If the new government doesn't co-operate, Miller said NDP and Progressive Conservative MPs will embarrass the Liberals into taking action.

The B.C. fishery faces a maze of difficult problems and some industry experts say it is in a major decline as was the Atlantic fishery five years ago.

Lack of funds kills workshop

The Capital Region Association for the Mentally Handicapped has given up hope of government cash aid to keep the Langwood Workshop open, says executive director Ralph Vipond.

Consequently, he said, the workshop will close as planned on March 31 because the association can no longer afford the deficit.

Vipond and the association's chairman, Dr. George Stocker, confirmed the closure after meeting with Human Resources Minister Grace McCarthy on Thursday.

The closure statement came even though McCarthy said she is optimistic the extra $23,000 funding needed to keep the centre open may yet be found.

"We've put a lot of hours into it so far and we'll continue to do that and hope we'll have a resolution," McCarthy said.

However, in a statement, Dr. Stocker said he is dismayed the minister apparently does not believe the rights of the mentally handicapped ought to be guaranteed by the government.

Stocker said McCarthy told them services such as the workshop are the responsibility of the community with the government's role to assist.

At one point in the meeting, said Vipond, McCarthy said she felt stongly that taxpayers aren't prepared to fund such operations.

"One couldn't avoid the feeling that the minister's meeting with us was really just an attempt to meet her political obligations,." he said.

"Nothing of substance was discussed. The minister asked a lot of questions to which she already had the answers."

McCarthy said the question of extra funds for the centre is far more complex than has been publicly stated.

She said the association received a 21-per-cent increase in funding a year ago and there have been problems in the past year with accountability, although those problems have since been straightened out.

"We have indicated to them that we will look again at it. We will meet again and we will see what can be done. There is no announcement I can make," the minister said.

Hospital price up

Tenders are expected to be called in mid-March for construction of the patient wings at the new Victoria General Hospital site on Helmcken Road.

But the hospital's board of management was told Thursday the estimated cost of the project is expected to be about $900,000 more than 1978 estimate of $18,663,000.

Board chairman Alan Patterson said the increase is due to a number of indivdual price increases for such items as aluminum windows which increased to $223,500 from $54,400.

Patterson said the contract is expected to be awarded in early May.

Towing of parked cars probed

There have been numerous complaints to city hall recently about Gordon's Towing, mainly about the unsavory location of its impoundment lot after dark, city council was told Thursday night.

City engineer John Sansom was asked to explore other ways of penalizing parking lot violators than towing them to Gordon's lot at 50 Songhees Road.

Traffic committee chairman Ald. John Cooper said women who have had their cars legally towed away are afraid to cross the Johnson Street bridge on foot to bail out their vehicles because the neighborhood isn't safe at night.

"Their personal safety is jeopardized," he said.

In one case, they couldn't even attempt the trip on foot because the bridge was up. The only other access involves a two-mile detour via the Point Ellice bridge.

Cooper said today he wants to see a more central location for Gordon's impoundment lot which any driver can approach day or night and feel safe.

Ald. Bill McElroy also brought up two American couples' recent complaint that Gordon's had refused them the exchange on a U.S. $20 bill they used to pay their towing fee. The firm had also damaged their rented vehicle, they claimed.

If the towing companies violate the city's bylaws, council should lift their licences, he said.

Ald. Robin Blencoe claimed that the company had even towed away an ambulance from the Royal Jubilee Hospital.

Throne speech repeats previous promises

Columbians shall enjoy a program of health care second to none in North America. In keeping with this resolve, the dental care assistance program, proposed by my minister of health last year, will be implemented later this fiscal year."

No further details were given.

There were some new initiatives promised, however.

A Holiday Shopping Act will deal with the problem of Sunday openings, which has been a big issue in Vancouver lately.

"It will place responsibility at the community level for determining restrictions in the operation of retail businesses on holidays," said the speech.

Farm workers will be brought under the umbrella of the Labor Code and given a code of employment standards for their protection.

Workers' compensation will be extended to improve safety in the workplace.

Chiropractic, naturopathic, podiatric and psychotherapy benefits will be increased under the B.C. Medical Plan.

A Family and Child Services Act — replacing existing statutes which have been largely thrown out by the courts — will be brought in to encourage and support the role of the family in matters pertaining to child welfare.

There will also be a new co-ordinated program for children with special needs.

B.C. Rail, now mired in debt, will be put on a financial footing similarv to the B.C. Ferry Corp. and the provincial highway system.

Unspecified job-creation programs — a perennial item in throne speeches for nearly a decade — will be proposed.

Vocational education will be expanded, in the high schools and community colleges, while apprenticeship programs will be enriched.

Small business gets a boost with legislation promising a new type of investment company providing equity capital for small enterprises.

The government also promises to cut red tape for building projects, while it pledges to improve construction safety standards.

Uniform fire prevention standards will will be established for B.C. and there will be a simplified system for land use appeals.

Protection of the rentalsman's office will be extended to cover permanent residents in hotels — a key concern of groups working in the Skid Road area of Vancouver.

But the expected move to extend the rentalsman's jurisdiction over apartments built since 1974 was not in the throne speech.

The government also promises to amend the Highways Act so major roads in any municipality may be designated a provincial highway. Now, municipalities with population over 30,000 are excluded from the benefits of the act.

In addition, the speech says the agriculture ministry will work more closely with the food industry in B.C. to promote B.C. products.

However Bennett said later consumers should not expect the move to have any effect on spiralling food costs.

A full page of the seven-page speech is devoted to energy matters. It includes a promise to re-establish a Public Utilities Commission, made public recently by Energy Minister Bob McClelland.

The revived PUC should have power to review telephone rate increases, if Ottawa goes ahead with a commitment to give B.C. jurisdiction over the federally-chartered B.C. Telephone Co. monopoly.

"Procedures will also be established (by the PUC) for reviewing applications for the export of energy from B.C., to ensure that future energy requirements of all of our people are fully protected."

There is also announcement of a coal gasification study project.

Universities Minister Pat McGeer is putting together a research group to look at ways of making synthetic crude oil from B.C.'s vast reserves of coal, the speech said.

"Considering that through existing technology a metric ton of coal can produce up to three barrels of gasoline, and considering that our Hat Creek coal deposit alone is estimated to contain up to 15 billion metric tons, and possibly more, the potential of this new source of energy for B.C and for Canada all but staggers the imagination."

More dams are also on the way, the speech hinted.

It notes that B.C. has harnessed only a third of its possible hydroeletric potential, a valuable source of renewable energy which is being wasted.

"Full consideration will be given to salvaging this huge energy source, but in such a way that it will not diminish our abundant salmon fisheries."

A revamping of the environment department is indicated in the speech. A new ministerial act will be introduced as a first step towards a review of all provincial environmental legislation, the speech said.

"Also legislation will be introduced to allow my minister of the environment to provide immediate response to pollution emergencies."

Mao put down

PEKING (UPI) — The Chinese Communist Party today announced a massive political shakeup consolidating the power of Vice-Premier Deng Xiaoping and downgrading the image of the late chairman Mao Tsetung.

Four members of the Communist Party Political Bureau, the country's top decision making body, were fired. All were holdovers from the era of Mao's 1966-76 Cultural Revolution.

The shakeup was announced by Peking Radio and Central Television after the close of the fifth plenary session of the party's 11th Central Committee, which started last Saturday and closed today.

The Central Committee also decided to call a general congress of the Chinese Party before the next scheduled session in 1982, in the light of "changed world conditions."

Diplomatic sources in Peking said the Congress — 12th in the history of the 55-year-old party — might take place as early as next summer.

Thai PM resigns

BANGKOK (Reuter) — Prime Minister Kriangsak Chomanan of Thailand resigned today after 27 months in office, plunging the country into a major political crisis.

The 62-year-old retired army general announced his decision at a special joint session of parliament called to defend his government's economic policies in the wake of widespread criticism over recent oil price increases.

TOWN TALK

An ego-tripping Honolulu newspaper that printed a special edition full of good things about Hawaii — and six sections of nothing but good news — can give Canada a lesson in promoting national pride, says Victoria resident Bob Hunter.

Hunter brought the Honolulu Advertiser back to Victoria with him hoping the idea might catch on at the Times.

Included in the edition were 1,980 good things about Hawaii listed by reporters.

Victoria and the rest of Canada would do well by following Honolulu's example, says Hunter, of 3527 Redwood.

"We're so hesitant to say anything good about our own country. We have some kind of inferiority complex," he said.

Jack and Elva Cash found sterling qualities in a former floating church

. . . wave tossed his dinghy back aboard

By PAT DUFOUR

The "ship of faith" has just ended a brief unheralded visit to Victoria.

She's the 70-foot Columbian, affectionately remembered by people in the communities along the west coast for its years of faithful service. She is now operated as a charter boat by owners Jack and Elva Cash of Vancouver.

The Columbian was built by Star Shipyard of New Westminster in 1956 and began her career as the Columbia III of the Anglican Church's Columbia Coast Mission.

It was in the days she served as a floating church with the mission she won the ship-of-faith tag. Her parishioners were the isolated coastal loggers, fishermen, villagers and their families.

Her master, Rev. Ivan Futter, now vicar of St. Stephen's Church in Central Saanich, then had 10,000 square miles of parish to cover in his sturdy little ship.

Futter, of 8056 McPhail, recalls her last trip as a mission boat was in 1969 when he took her from Port Hardy to Vancouver. It was the trip he most remembers.

"We were out in a full gale, there wasn't a single drawer in place by the time we tied up.

"When I phoned the office to say we were in they said it couldn't be. It was so rough there wasn't a single freighter out at sea."

In 1960 when Hurricane Freda hit, she was caught off Pine Island. All the windows in her wheelhouse were smashed but she made it to shore.

Once in 1966 a 120-km/h gale wrenched the dinghy from the ship but a huge wave hurled it back on board!

On another occasion the ship had an emergency call to pick up a Gilford Island woman who needed an emergency operation.

The fog was so thick the crew couldn't see 10 feet beyond the bow, and the ship had no radar at that time.

"But the Columbia is a ship of faith and we managed to land by carefully picking our way through the rocks," Futter said.

In her new role and with her new name, some of her features have been changed. She has been fitted with most of the modern electronic navigational aids.

Her roomy stern has been enclosed to supply a closed-in observation lounge and a sundeck above. The lounge even has a friendly old-fashioned pot-bellied stove.

The combination main lounge and dining room amidships was once the surgery. In addition to an operating table, it had a dentist's chair and x-ray machine.

The former chapel below decks has been made into staterooms and the old darkroom down there is now the heads.

The Columbian is still powered by the original eight-cylinder Gardner diesel. Her generator, however, is a new water-cooled Lister.

Shortly after Cash and his wife bought the Columbian from the mission they had their own reason to believe she is truly a ship of faith.

At that time they already owned a 50-footer and Cash was operating a commercial photography company. He was spending the days at his office in town and the evenings working on the Columbian. But this ideal arrangement was disrupted when Cash was struck down with polio.

He spent some time in hospital but soon became impatient and insisted on being let out. With his wife's help he struggled back to the Columbian to recuperate.

Then one day they noticed their old boat, nearby, was sinking.

"I ran down into the engine room (of the old boat), got the pumps going and that was the end of my sickness," Cash says.

But as recently as last Easter Cash and his wife had proof anew the old ship has sterling qualities, not necessarily spiritual, that bring her owners through in the pinch.

A fierce storm hit as they left the Mainland at 5:30 a.m. Cash was at the wheel for the next nine hours until finally making the sheltered reaches of False Bay on Lasqueti Island. At the height of the storm Cash had to cut the engine as the Columbian reached the top of every cresting wave.

But he says he never had any real doubts she'd come through.

That's the kind of ship she is.

RJH refuses to take any blame for elderly man losing his sight

By LORRAINE LOCHERTY

Royal Jubilee hospital board chairman Eric Simmons today denied charges by a Victoria eye specialist that an elderly man went permanently blind waiting six months for surgery.

Hospital records indicate it's not the hospital's fault the man lost his sight, Simmons said.

A statement by Dr. D.P. North that the surgery delay cost the man his vision is inaccurate and dangerous, he said.

"Those kinds of charges do nothing to help how the populace feel about the hospital," Simmons said.

North today refused comment.

Simmons said patients waiting for cataract surgery may be unduly alarmed by North's claim the patient's sight could have been saved if the operation had been performed earlier.

An investigation of the records kept by the director of admitting indicate those are not the reasons the man lost his sight, according to Simmons.

All hospital records concerning the incident have been turned over to the health ministry, said Simmons, who refused to elaborate.

SIMMONS

. . . other reasons

Health Minister Rafe Mair said today the investigation has been completed and his ministry is preparing a statement for release in the next day or two.

Simmons said if Mair doesn't make the statement by Monday he will hold a press conference to clear the hospital of an implications of improper procedure.

He said he is convinced the hospital is not at fault.

In a letter to the Times last week, North said he is angry certain doctors feel patients are not suffering while waiting for elective surgery.

He cited the example of the blind man and then said other doctors could list similar examples of patients who have suffered permanent damage because of long waiting lists at both general hospitals.

Victoria Medical Society president Dr. Paul Broome said the case is typical of the kind of thing alarming the medical profession.

Mental and physical suffering caused by long delays for elective surgery at both hospitals is a serious problem, Broome said.

End run on abortion committee

By BRENDA DALGLISH

In an attempt to thwart its therapeutic abortion committee, Victoria General Hospital's board of management Thursday night expanded it from three to seven members.

But Dr. Don Shorting, VGH's chief of medical staff who sits on the board, indicated the expansion probably won't have the effect of allowing abortions to resume at the hospital.

He didn't elaborate but it's understood he meant the addition wouldn't sufficiently change the voting pattern.

The expansion, which passed by a six to four vote, was accomplished by appointing the four alternate members to the existing committee.

The abortion committee has rejected almost every application it received and resisted an earlier attempt by the board to circumvent it.

Some members of the board suggested they'd been misled when appointing the committee earlier this year.

"My understanding when passing those three names was that they would continue the practice of previous abortion committees. I feel I've been deceived," said board member Cathy Mountain.

Another member, Eugene Kaellis, said medical executive director Dr. Don Carlow had identified the three proposed appointees as "mildly pro-lifers."

Chairman Alan Patterson told the members that, as the abortion committee had warned, the board's legal position is "sensitive," according to a preliminary report from its solicitor.

The legal opinion was sought following receipt of a letter from the abortion committee which questioned the board's right to replace it with the committee from Royal Jubilee Hospital.

The board then voted to rescind the appointment of the RJH committee.

It decided to expand the committee's membership, as an interim solution, until the end of March or until, as board member Bob Milne described it, "we're prepared to bite the bullet."

Patterson offered the board an alternative — rescinding its current committee and appointing the RJH committee (whose members would qualify as they are members of VGH staff too).

But, he cautioned: "Any action by this board to rescind appointment of the committee by this board would have a pretty bad effect on the medical staff, the board, and the administration."

The committee didn't further discuss the alternative.

Mountain proposed a motion that the abortion committee be asked to resign because they were not acting within the guidelines laid out by the board or the World Health Organization (which was suggested as a guideline by the federal government when it brought in existing abortion legislation) when deciding on abortions.

The hospital and WHO guidelines suggest that more than just the physical health of the patient should be a consideration when deciding on an abortion.

This motion was defeated six to four.

Board member Bob McQueen said he believed the board appoints the committee, leaves further decisions up to it and doesn't try to influence its actions.

McQueen asked that the solicitor be contacted for his opinion on the board's authority to establish guidelines and require that they be followed. The board now has a list of guidelines and one of its committees is working on a revised list following a recomendation from a coroner's jury after a controversial lawsuit last year about an abortion done on a mentally handicapped woman.

New York Times

Petitions, Cleveland and girls

NEW YORK — A petition urging American participation in the Moscow Olympics, signed by some members of the U.S. Winter Olympics team, was to have been delivered to President Carter the other day when the skiers and skaters visited the White House. However, it was held back in the hope of getting more signatures.

A couple of points should be made, maybe remade. First, the United States is not going to Moscow. Jimmy Carter has announced a firm and final decision and Hodding Carter (Southron but no relation) has described the decision as irrevocable. The leaders of the United States Olympic Committee will pout and drag their feet and mumble about their responsibility to American youth but in the end they will bow to the request of the president, the almost unanimous vote of the Congress and the overwhelming sentiment of the people.

Second, with all respect for the young people who competed so earnestly at Lake Placid, there is no clear evidence that sliding downhill, chasing a puck or describing figure-eights on ice automatically qualifies one as an authority on foreign relations equiped to advise the president and his staff.

"A lot is being said," a thoughtful reader writes, "about the frustration that would be suffered by competitors who have worked long years to build up their skill, were they denied the opportunity of displaying it. All their labors, it is claimed, would be wasted, useless. It is the word, the concept of, 'waste' that I am objecting to.

"In these confusing, turbulent times, when we are torn between the wisdom of patience and the perils of inaction, our athletes' skill is our only weapon. Because of it, our choice is no longer limited to bearing with evil (which is shameful) or silencing it, and us, in blood (which is unthinkable).

"Disappointed as the athletes have a right to be, they must be helped to realize that, by forfeiting the Olympics, they would still be using their skill. Far from being wasted, their long labors have endowed them with a prestige, hence a power, that nobody else has — that of preserving humanity's dignity while avoiding the horror of an armed conflict. Of that power, they must be proud; for that power, we must be grateful."

The news from Colorado Springs, Colo., must have cheered Gloria Steinem, Betty Friedan, Patricia Roberts Harris, and all who regard Title IX as a step toward equality for women in sports. Colorado Springs is home base for the U. S. Olympic Committee but the news item in question had, for a change, nothing to do with Lake Placid or Moscow. It was about girls' basketball, high school girls' basketball.

The distaff teams of Air Academy High and Harrison High, both undefeated, met for the league championship. It was a rouser, with Harrison winning on a free throw after time had run out, 56-55.

Shortly afterward, about 75 students from the two schools resumed competition in the parking lot, employing ax handles and other blunt implements to make their points. Four students and a cop named Timothy Sullivan were injured. Sullivan, who was trying to break up the brawl, said two students tried to run him down with a car. They were arrested.

When girls can stir such passions merely by playing roundball, then we can be assured that the feminist movement is coming on like Spectacular Bid. Soon we will grow familiar with the headline, "12 Die in Women's Soccer Riot in Brazil." Then we shall have reached the millenium.

Larry Holmes is a heavyweight champion of a world. As Muhammad Ali often reminded us, the heavyweight champion is, in the eyes of some, the greatest man in the world. Lately, however, Holmes has come down to join the crowd. He hates Cleveland, just like ordinary people.

Just why the misspelled metropolis on Lake Erie should be regarded with such distaste by so many has always been a mystery here. To be sure, Terminal Tower is seldom compared to Angkor Wat by moonlight, but Cleveland has — or used to have — a place serving excellent barbecued ribs to go. Detroit did, too.

During World War II when American League baseball teams rode the night boat from Cleveland to Detroit and from Detroit to Cleveland, players would stock up on ribs and beer before getting aboard. Dining at greasy leisure in a stateroom, washing the sweet meat down with a brew and throwing the bones out the porthole, made it a pleasure to approach or depart from Cleveland. The days in between were something else.

Holmes has thrown a hate on Cleveland because of a practical joke that wouldn't be funny in any town. He was training there for a forthcoming fight with Leroy Jones until the other day, when pranksters served him with a fake subpoena in a nonexistent paternity suit. "They don't play jokes like that in Easton," Larry said, heading for him home in Pennsylvania.

The late Harry Grayson, known as the Sportswriter from Mars, hated Cleveland because it wasn't New York. When he was sports editor of Newspaper Enterprise Association, he had to work in Cleveland because NEA had headquarters there.

One winter day Harry was trudging up Euclid Avenue ("Silly damn name for a main street. Any other town, they'd call it Broadway or Main Street, am I right?"). Fists thrust in overcoat pockets, head turtled down into the collar, he leaned into a blizzard that came howling off the lake.

"Hey, Mac," a stranger called from a car at the curb, "how do I get out of town?"

"Silly ass," Harry said. "If I knew, d'you think I'd be here?"

A close call for Belmont

By MAX LOW

Belmont Braves, Courtenay Towhees, Victoria High Totems and Nanaimo Islanders tonight head into the championship semi-finals in the 30th annual Vancouver Island high school boys' basketball championships — but, boy, Belmont certainly cut things close when first-round games began at UVic's McKinnon Gym Thursday night.

"Too close!" coach Muzz Bryant sighed after his Braves hung on to squeeze out a thrilling 68-66 victory over the hustling Alberni Chieftains.

Belmont, top-ranked South Island school, takes on Courtenay, the North Island's second-rated team which got past Parkland 61-44, at 5:15 today. Totems play Nanaimo Islanders in the other game at 8:45 and sandwiched inbetween will be the UVic Vikettes' Canada West playoff game with Calgary Dinnies at 7 p.m.

Totems, second behind Belmont in the South, surprised the talented Cowichan Thunderbirds 74-63 despite some great work by the up-Island school's six-foot, nine-inch centre Greg Walters, and to no one's great surprise the Islanders, third-ranked high school team in the province, beat hard-working Oak Bay Bays 84-51.

The Belmont-Alberni game was a thriller all the way and the closeness of the scores kept the large crowd of fans on the edge of their seats throughout.

Right from the start, the game was end-to-end with the evenly-matched schools trading basket for basket. It was 2-0, 2-2, 4-2, 4-4, 6-4, 6-6 and so on up to a first-quarter score of 18-18.

It was still close at half time with Alberni leading 33-30 but Belmont inched ahead to lead 52-49 at the end of three quarters.

The real excitement started late in the final quarter when Belmont appeared to have things sewn up with a 65-58 lead until the Chieftains unleashed a determined finish that saw them pull to within one point at 67-66 with a minute left.

Belmont fans screamed and Bryant's knees buckled slightly as Alberni shooters missed a couple from the foul line and then, with 16 seconds left, the Braves opted to inbound the ball (instead of shooting from the foul line) and try to run the clock out. They lost possession, however, and it looked over for Belmont when Alberni got close enough to have a last shot at the hoop. That one just missed, however, and a final point from a foul shot gave the Braves their two-point margin.

Rob Ekstrom scored 22 points to lead the Braves, who got some fine outside shooting from Ray McAllister, a 19-point scorer. Rick Crema had 21 points for the Chieftains and Boyd Gallic 20.

"Their foul shooting killed them," Bryant said of the Chieftains. "We were 10 for 19 from the foul line while they had 22 foul shots and scored on only six of them."

The Belmont coach felt that, as long as his team can play as well as it did Thursday, they could beat Courtenay tonight and make it into Saturday night's championship final.

The Towhees edged Belmont by two points earlier this season and they certainly looked confident enough against Parkland.

Towhees' tall shooters, Brent Daniel with 24 points and Bob Hoeppner with 18, gave the smaller Parkland players a lot of trouble. Dexter Williams led the Sidney school with 16 points.

Vic High nearly threw their championship chances away. They took command early but blew the 24-point lead they held at one stage and held a 39-25 advantage at half time. By the end of three quarters, though, that lead had been whittled away to 52-49 and soon after the start of the last quarter, Cowichan went ahead.

But, with Darren Alexander rounding off his 26-point performance, the Tyees settled down and took over again in the last three minutes. Teammate Ryan Campbell had 15 points and doing most of the damage for Cowichan was Walters, who picked up 15 rebounds on the way to his 26 points. Gary Stockford had 17 points.

After a tame first quarter, at the end of which Nanaimo led only 17-12, the result was never in doubt for the tall and powerful Islanders, obviously very much the team to beat in this tourney.

They led by just 11 points with a 36-25 edge at half time but took control in the second half, shooting into a 58-38 lead by the end of three quarters. Terry Nohr was the Islanders' top shooter with 22 points while Dan Steffes had 20 and Randy Hess had 14 for Oak Bay.

Alberni played Parkland and Cowichan met Oak Bay in games this afternoon that will lead ultimately to a playoff to decide third and fourth places. Top three teams from the Island tourney qualify for the B.C. championships in Vancouver Mar. 12-15.

(Scoring on page 23).

Bench-clearing Flyers pay dearly

Times News Services

Philadelphia Flyers' coach Pat Quinn has been suspended for three games and fined $1,000 for allowing a bench-clearing fight with Vancouver Canucks last Friday, the National Hockey League announced.

Philadelphia also received an automatic fine of $5,000 because one of the Flyers was the first to leave the bench during an altercation, for the third time this season. Defenceman Frank Bathe, the player who left the bench first, got an automatic one-game suspension and was suspended without pay for two other games.

Other players from both teams got automatic fines totalling $4,100.

The Feb. 22 incident caused a delay of about 45 minutes and resulted in 258 minute in penalties, with 15 players being ejected from the game — eight from Vancouver and seven from Philadelphia.

Quinn denied telling Bathe to leave the bench, but acknowledged at the NHL's hearing that he signalled three other Flyers in the penalty box to go on the ice.

Still off the ice, NHL teams continue to sign members of the U.S. team that won the Olympic gold medal.

Mark Johnson, 22, a centre, has agreed to terms with Pittsburgh Penguins and will forego his final year at the University of Wisconsin.

Defenceman Dave Christian, 20, has been signed by Winnipeg Jets.

Both Johnson and Christian may dress for weekend games.

The news is good but not ready to dress for at least another week is Montreal Canadien ace Guy Lafleur. His injured knee, which has already caused the right winger to miss four games, does not require surgery. It's a contusion of the knee, along with stretched ligaments, and Lafleur should be skating by the weekend. He could be ready to play next Thursday.

On the ice, Boston Bruins are not accustomed to being handled with ease inside their own building. Not in recent years, that is, and certainly not by the New York Rangers.

But with the playoffs drawing nearer, the Rangers are finally showing the skills which brought them to the Stanley Cup final last season.

Even the opposition is noticing.

"They checked as well as I've seen a Ranger team in some time," said Fred Creighton, Boston's coach after the Rangers whipped his club 5-2 in the Boston Garden Thursday.

In the other two games Pierre Larouche scored his 39th and 40th goals as Montreal Canadiens defeated Minnesota North Stars 6-3 and Detroit Red Wings downed Washington Capitals 4-1.

BRIEFLY: Winnipeg Jets have acquired right winger Kris Manery from Vancouver . . . Manery, 25, scored two goals in 21 games this season with the Canucks . . . Washington, decimated by injuries all season, finally got some good news . . . Centre Dennis Maruk, out since late October with torn knee ligaments, returned to action Thursday in Detroit.

End of the line for Palmateer?

TORONTO (CP) — Toronto Maple Leaf goaltender Mike Palmateer will not be back with the National Hockey League team next season, agent Alan Eagleson said Thursday.

"Under no circumstances will he sign a new contract with the Leafs," Eagleson said, responding to remarks reported to have been made by Leafs' owner Harold Ballard, which appearred in today's edition of The Globe and Mail. "Ballard and (general manager Punch) Imlach have a vendetta going to discredit Mike."

Ballard is reported to have said to columnist Dick Beddoes that "Palmateer's living habits bother me. I've thought of putting a tail or detective on him to find out where he goes when he leaves rink."

Ballard said, however, he was quoted inaccurately, but Beddoes defended the column, saying the club owner made the remarks Jan. 22 in Atlanta where the Leafs were playing the Flames.

"Ballard was very blunt and to the point and the quote is very accurate," Beddoes said.

Palmateer, along with Darryl Sittler, have been at odds with Leafs' management since September when they ignored Ballard's request that the two not take part in the filming of the Showdown intermision feature.

Eagleson also has been engaged in a running quarrel with Ballard and Imlach over terms of a contract for the goaltender, who becomes a free agent June 1.

"This is not the first time I've heard this type of thing about Mike," Eagleson said. "These latest comments are disgraceful.

Ballard said he would never interfere in players' private lives.

"It's the same as handling drapes," he said, referring to a cut hand Palmateer suffered two years ago while hanging curtains in his apartment at 3 a.m. "He can do whatever he pleases after 5 p.m. I don't interfere with someone's private life."

Palmateer, 26, has been sidelined since Dec. 26 with an ankle injury, but is scheduled to return to the lineup shortly. He is in the option year of his contract and Eagleson is demanding a no-cut, five-year contract worth about $200,000 a season, compared with the $70,000 Palmateer now earns.

Fishing returns best in southern waters

Salmon fishermen on the southern end of Vancouver Island are getting the best returns this week.

Chinooks to 16 pounds are showing close to the bottom off Secretary Island and Otter Point at Sooke with green and white or silver patterned lures and strip responsible for most of the catch.

Church Rock and Aldridge Point waters at Becher Bay are yielding chinooks to 18 pounds. Most have been landed on strip, anchovies or white hootchies trolled at the 60-foot depth right at the tide change.

The tide change has also been productive for Pedder Bay fishermen, who have boated chinooks to 10 pounds at depths of 120 to 130 feet on strip, minnows and anchovies in Race Pass, around Bentinck Island and right through to Church.

Chinooks to 17 pounds are reported off Trial and Discovery islands near Oak Bay and a few small bluebacks are beginning to show.

Sidney fishermen are finding slim pickin's right now but Saanich Inlet waters have yielded chinooks to 15 pounds in the vicinity of Indian Bay and Tod Inlet. Best catches were taken on strip and plugs in Tod and on hootchies in outside waters at depths of up to 150 feet.

In Finlayson Arm, there's lots of feed and numerous chinooks. Unfortunately, this classic abundance also leads to short bite periods. Some lucky fishermen managed to be in the right place at the right time and caught fish to 12 pounds on Squirts and Tomic plugs trolled with 35 feet of line and two pounds of weight off Goldstream Island.

Further up-Island, moochers and deep-line trollers have picked up a few chinooks off Bold Bluff and in Sansum Narrows.

Chinooks and a few blues to about 4½ pounds are providing a little action off Nanaimo in the vicinity of Five Fingers. Red flashtails, trolled very deep, are providing the top catches.

On the other side of the Island, deep waters in Rainy Bay at the mouth of Alberni Inlet has produced a few chinooks to eight pounds.

Trout anglers started to pick up a few fish in Quamichan and Somenos lakes before the rain started but the water levels are far too high right now.

Another early spot to try might be Cowichan Lake.

Gowsell opener won't scare Tim

Times News Services

Paul Gowsell is a rebel to some well-entrenched members of the curling establishment.

The 22-year-old skip with the flaming red hair is noted for his brashness. He has a reputation for being loud while using profane language at times. He prefers blue jeans to flannels in a sport where color co-ordinated outfits are the rule.

But the controversial Calgary skip, who said after he won the Alberta men's title, "I've never even seen a Brier game played," is also talented and rates as one of the favorites in the Canadian men's curling championships starting at Calgary, Sunday.

Gowsell, who has directed his rink to about $150,000 in bonspiel money tournaments the last three years, has recently improved his image — slightly. Hair that once looked like a straw broom parted in the middle now is shaped, though still long. Even his beard is neater. He quit his job as a surveyor last October to concentrate on curling, or "my occupation."

Gowsell meets B.C. champion Tim Horrigan and his crew of third Lowell Goulden, second Kelly Horrigan and lead Dave Smith from the Victoria Curling Club in the first round Sunday. Horrigan gets a bye in the second round.

Meeting Gowsell shouldn't bother Horrigan. Speaking of brashness, he can hold his own in that league, is highly confident, and said before he left Victoria for Calgary: "I'm looking forward to meeting Gowsell, and if my rink curls as it did in the B.C. playoffs, it could be interesting. We'll do our best."

The appearance of the cocky Gowsell, two-time winner of the world junior men's title — and his rink of third Neil Houston, second Glen Jackson and lead Kelly Stearne comes when the sport is undergoing a transition.

It's been changed to the Labatt Brier, for the new sponsor taking over from Macdonald Tobacco Co., which dropped out in the 50th championship in 1979.

Gowsell, who was evicted from the host motel the day after winning the A event in the Alberta playoffs, won't have his own way, however.

One of the rinks expected to give him trouble will be Rick Folk and his Saskatchewan crew from Saskatoon. Folk will be representing his province for the third consecutive year, although this time he will have Ron Mills at third instead of Bob Thompson.

Manitoba will be represented by Earle Morris of the Canadian Forces Base Curling Club in Winnipeg. Morris, who came up empty four successive years in the Ontario championship, will have brothers Clare and Garry DeBlonde, at third and second respectively, and Warren Winston at lead.

Jim Ursel of Montreal, winner of the Canadian title in 1977, will be making his seventh appearance — sixth as a skip.

The appearances as a skip ties Ursel with Reg Stone of Trail.

Al Delmage of Yellowknife will represent the Territories.

Representing Ontario will be Russ Howard of Penetanguishene and Al Hackner will skip the Northern Ontario foursome from Thunder Bay.

Wayne Hamilton directs his St. John's rink from Newfoundland, Ted McHadyen heads the Prince Edward Island representative from Crapaud, Peter Hope skips the Dartmouth rink from Nova Scotia and Richard Belyea, who uses a whistle to signal his sweeping calls, will skip the Saint John entry from New Brunswick.

Andrew clicks for 1,039 series

Ron Andrew, a once-a-week competitor, made a big splash and earned men's fivepin laurels during the 19th week of the 17th annual Times Bowler-of-the-Week contest by rolling the highest series so far this season on Vancouver Island.

Sharon Sansbury collected women's laurels.

Ron, a 30-year-old accountant who has bowled for 10 years, chalked up a 334-325-380 — 1,039 series in the Wednesday Majors League at Town and Country Lanes. But it wasn't his best ever. He rolled a 1,090 seven years ago in Calgary before moving to Victoria.

The Victoria record of 1,088 was set by Fred Hickey last season.

Sharon rolled her division-topping 299-294-222 — 815 series in the Commercial League at Miracle Lanes in Sidney.

Dexter rink gains playoff

EDMONTON (CP) — Colleen Jones brings a lot of intensity to her curling but she won't be found hanging around the Klondike Palace arena today watching the tie-breaking rounds in the Canadian women's curling championships.

"I can think of a lot of things to do that'll keep my concentration there," she said after clinching a berth in the title match of the championship.

The Halifax rink beat Donna Brownridge of Winnipeg 7-6 in the 10th round Thursday to win a bye into the Lassie final, then took Dorothy Crowe of St. Bruno, Que., 12-7 in the 11th and final round to finish with a 9-1 record.

While Jones and Co. are taking it easy Regina's Marj Mitchell will face Joan Dexter of New Westminster, and Davis will play Christine Bodogh of St. Catharines, Ont., in tie-breaking games to determine the two contenders for the semi-final Saturday morning. The semi-final winner meets Nova Scotia Saturday afternoon.

The four rinks finished with 6-4 records after the final round-robin draw. Alberta lost 7-6 to B.C. in the 10th round and had a bye in the 11th, while Dexter went on to beat Manitoba 11-8 despite the fact she was playing without her third, Lou Logan.

Logan took a spill in the first end and broke her wrist in two places, forcing Dexter to use Edmonton curler Anne McGarvey as a sweeper.

Islanders on medal binge

KIMBERLEY — Butch Sloan wasn't at the British Columbia Winter Games, but his students made his influence felt on Thursday.

Six members of Sloan's Campbell River Judo Club formed half the Vancouver Island-Central Coast judo team. And three of them won their divisions.

"He's got a great attitude; he gets us motivated; we work as a team," said Marion Sloan, 21, between bouts on her way to a gold medal in the 61 kg women's division.

She's so taken with her coach, she married him almost three years ago.

"I met Butch in judo," she said. "It kind of motivated me in training."

Club teammates Penny Belham, 18, took the 66 kg women's title and Calvin Charlton, 15, captured the boys' over-72 kg class.

Mr. Sloan, 26, is a member of the Canadian judo team and was first alternate in his weight class for the country's 1976 Olympic team, a position he holds with the 1980 Olympic team.

Both the Sloans began judo at about age 15. Mrs. Sloan has obtained her brown belt, one step below black belt. Mr. Sloan is a third-degree black belt.

"He's been there," said Mrs. Sloan of the motivation her husband gives his club.

"He fights like a featherweight, which is fast fighting, and he teaches all of us like featherweights, so it's not strong musclebound judo.

"It's fast — even the heavier girls and guys, they learn techniques that way. In the end, a technician and a featherweight will come out over the slower and stronger.

"He's got a great attitude. He was one of the youngest instructors in B.C. and he's still competing and at the same time coaching.

"It's very motivating to us. If he can do it — you see him working and striving — it's that much closer for us because we can see what he's going through."

Sharon Harrison of Nanaimo also earned a gold in the 52 kg class and Laurie Carr of Victoria captured the silver in the 66-kg class, finishing second to Karen Harvey of Port Coquitlam.

In skiing, Greg Sather threaded his way down a fog-shrouded 53-gate course to win the junior men's slalom race.

Sather, a 16-year-old Cranbrook skier, put together runs of 43.44 and 43.20 seconds to beat second-place Jeff O'Reilly, 14, of Kelowna, by more than two seconds.

A light morning drizzle turned to a steady rain during the afternoon, even at the top of 6,000-foot North Star Mountain.

To complicate matters, above-freezing temperature and rain on the snow combined to create a heavy fog.

In the other slalom events, Ron Williams of Smithers won the men's, Annette McClelland of Nelson took the junior women's, and Ardith Watson of Cranbrook topped the women's.

The junior class is made up of C-class racers, usually 13 to 16 years old, while the men's and women's is for racers over 19.

Broomball player sent home

KIMBERLEY, B.C. (CP) — A 21-year-old broomball player who arrived at his dormitory drunk almost two hours after curfew has been sent home from the B.C. Winter Games.

And his Burnaby team is under early curfew tonight, Games general chairman Ron Butlin said.

It is the third consecutive Games at which a team has been disciplined because of drinking. A hockey team was expelled from the first Winter Games last year at Kamloops, and a rugby team was given the boot at the second Summer Games in Richmond.

Butlin said the player, who he declined to identify, arrived at his dormitory at about 1 a.m. following the opening ceremony Wednesday night. Curfew for athletes is 11:30 p.m.

Butlin said the player was drunk, and abusive to Games security staff at the dormitory. The player was sent home and the team was given a 9 p.m. curfew and told it would be expelled if there are any additional problems.

Trios, Leafs, Athletics prevail in puck playoffs

Oak Bay Trios, Esquimalt Maple Leafs and Victoria Athletics chalked up victories Thursday as semifinal playoffs continued in two southern Vancouver Island hockey leagues.

Trios edged Fuller Lake Flyers 9-7 at Oak Bay Recreation Centre to sweep a best-of-three series in the South Vancouver Island Junior "B" League.

Gord Marshall and John Brown scored two goals each to lead the Oak Bay attack while singles were contributed by Ken Buna, Doug Baird, Gary Carruthers, Rob Gallimore and Paul Hughes. Greg Hollett and Keith Mazurenko each had two for Flyers and Ken Carter, Mike Eastman and Bert Van Mook came up with single tallies.

Mark Brown and Jim Lebitschnig combined to make 35 saves in the Fuller Lake net and Wade Jensen and Jay Longpre blocked 28 shots for Oak Bay.

League-champion Saanich Braves and Juan de Fuca Gulls open the other series at 8 p.m. Monday.

Leafs bounced Juan de Fuca Merchants 5-2 to take a 1-0-1 lead and Athletics grabbed a 2-0 advantage by pounding Western Homes Buckaroos 11-3 in South Island Big Six League best-of-five series games at Pearkes Arena.

Terry Parsons scored three goals to lead the Leafs while singles were added by Rugs Pritchard and Rob Coldwell. Randy Kerry and Tom Wilson replied for Merchants.

John Entzminger set the pace for Athletics with three goals, Dale Ewasiuk and Kevin Kennedy scored two each and singles were produced by Bruce Cowick, Graham Brown, Gord Neilson and Bryan Preston. Jerome Lidster (2) and Doug Berger replied for Buckaroos.

Ron Taffey made 33 saves in the Buckaroo net and Bob Crawford stopped 19 at the other end of the ice.

Panthers advance to girls final round

LANGLEY — Parkland Panthers advanced to the championship round of the British Columbia high school girls' "A" basketball championship here Thursday by beating Nechako of Vanderhoof, 36-32.

Nancy Duncan set the pace with 13 points for Panthers, who finished second in one division during preliminary round-robin play.

Panthers had bowed 45-31 to Kelowna on Wednesday.

Racing son of PM signs non-pay pact

LONDON (AP) — Mark Thatcher, racing driver son of British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher, signed a $90,000 contract Wednesday to drive for a British team.

Thatcher's recent antics have caused an uproar here. First he negotiated to model clothes for a Japanese firm. Then he discussed a sponsorship deal with Paul Raymond, who runs striptease clubs in Soho.

Now Mark — and his critics — are happy.

The $90,000 Mark will get from Brands Hatch Racing will be used to buy and maintain his two cars. He will not be paid.

THRASH spells it out for sailing fraternity

One of the biggest local racing events of the year takes place at the Royal Victoria Yacht Club March 15-16 when the club holds its second invitational T.H.R.A.S.H (Thank Heaven Racing and Spring Are Here) regatta.

A total of 104 boats took part last year and the fleet is expected to be much bigger this time around.

There will be four races with at least two divisions for boats racing with Pacific Handicap Racing Fleet ratings. There will also be one-design racing for Thunderbirds, Cal 20s, Catalina 27s and other classes that turn out in sufficient numbers.

The race fee, which includes a free dinner and dance for crews and their partners on the Saturday, is $20 per boat if the entry is received by the RVYC before March 10. The fee is $25 if it is received later. Registrations will close March 14.

Registration forms are available at Sail Trend, Bosun's Locker, the Sea Chest and Leitch and McBride Sails in Sidney, as well as McQuade's. They can also be had by writing the club at 3475 Ripon Road, Victoria, V8R 6H1.

Having taken part in last year's THRASH, I can guarantee this is a good way to get the racing season started.

The Victoria Thunderbird fleet will hold its winter championships at RVYC this weekend. There will be five races with no throw-outs. The first race will get under way at 10 a.m. Saturday.

RVYC's keel boats had two around-the-buoys races on Sunday. The first race for the larger PHRF boats was won by Jack Foster's Sherlock, runners-up being Jim Allen's Tiffany and Bruce Kenning's Arkle. The second time around it was Soren Isbrand's Danish Pastry, followed by Sherlock and Fleetwood, owned by Doug Hemphill and Dave Richardson.

Vidas Stukas' Jan won both races for the smaller PHRF boats. Mel Macara's Pittance and Bob Callow's Minstrel were runners-up in the first race. Pittance placed second again in the last race, edging out Ron Saunders' Irrawaddy.

Ron Jewula's Beowulf won both races for Catalina 27s, beating out Gary Jacobi's Salty Dream and Geoff Buck's Buckshot for top honors in the first race. The runners-up the next time around were Gerry Porter's Lickety Split and Buckshot. Denny Robinson's Coco won the first race for Thunderbirds, edging out Gary Cooney's Hocus and Rod McBride's LeMolo. The second time around it was Hocus, followed by Coco and Lemolo.

Daryl and Sandy Foster really have their Columbia 26 Tzonqua moving these days. They beat out a fleet of 35 boats to win the Canoe Bay Sailing Club's six-miler on Saturday and also won the club's 14½-mile Canoe Rock the previous Sunday. The club originally reported Ron Wickstrom's Windless II as winner of the Canoe Rock race but a recheck of time allowances gave Tzonqua the win.

Finishing after her on Saturday were Gordie Inglis' Water Mellon, Holger Brix's Caliente, Windless II, Jim Morris' Madeleine, Don Wilson's Menehune, Roger Vale's Temenos, Ken Martin's Stirling Shamrock, Kevin McCullough's Vagrant and Bruce Watson's War Bonnet.

The club will have it's 12-mile D'Arcy Shoals race on Sunday. The start will be at 9:30 a.m. in the vicinity of the Sidney government wharf.

Cruising class boats and dinghy sailors of the Esquimalt Squadron, Canadian Forces Sailing Association, will have series racing again on Sunday, beginning at 1 p.m. in Esquimalt Harbor.

Lack of wind frustrated most of the crews that sailed in last Sunday's race for keel boats and only two boats were able to finish within the time limit. Rod Newman's Aine won the race, being followed by Olav Thyvold's Gjoa.

Members of the Victoria Canoe Club will have a paddle-around Esquimalt Harbor on Sunday, meeting at the bridge on Esquimalt Lagoon at 10:30 a.m. The leaders for this particular sortie are Walt Neilson (382-2098) and Harry Marsh (478-5178).

Dave Thompson will give a talk on canoe racing when the club meets at 7:30 p.m. on Tuesday in the upper hall of St. Martin-in-the Fields Church, 550 Obed Avenue.

There will also be home movies to round out the evening. John Espley will show footage shot on the Nitinat and Kennedy Lakes while Bill Skinner will show film taken on a canoe camping trip up Salmon Arm.

Whitecaps deal Parkes to Sting

Times News Services

Vancouver Whitecaps of the North American Soccer League have solved their contract problems with all-star goalkeeper Phil Parkes by selling him to Chicago Sting.

Vancouver will also get a first-round draft pick.

Parkes, whose six-foot, three-inch height earned him the nickname Lofty, had played three seasons with Vancouver and recorded 23 shutouts in 78 regular-season games. He also had league-leading goals-against averages of .965 last season and .95 in 1978.

The Whitecaps also announced the purchase of David Robb, fourth-best scorer in the North American Soccer League last year, from Philadelphia Fury.

The Whitecaps said the 32-year-old Scottish forward was obtained in a straight cash deal.

Robb, a rugged, proven goal-scorer, had 16 goals and assisted on 20 last year for 52 points.

At Edmonton, the Drillers announced the signing of West German star Peter Nogly.

Wenzel wins again to close in on title

WATERVILLE VALLEY, N.H. (AP) — Hanni Wenzel, the pride of Liechtenstein, says her two gold medals at the 1980 Winter Olympics have created some problems.

She's on her way to a second World Cup over-all title, she's 23 and she must make a decision next month whether to continue racing or retire and reap the benefits of Olympic gold.

"There are too many problems with the two gold medals," Hanni said after she won a World Cup giant slalom race Thursday. "I must think two or three weeks before I make a decision."

Meanwhile, she is basking in her success and the glory she has brought to her homeland of 22,000 citizens.

"At least after I won the medals, everyone knows where Liechtenstein is," she said. (The country — 14 miles long and eight miles wide — borders Switzerland and Austria.)

Wenzel turned in runs of one minute 10.05 seconds and 1:06.33 for a total of 2:16.38 and a victory margin of three quarters of a second over Maria Epple of West Germany. Maria led after one run of 1:09.67, then clocked 1:07.46 in the afternoon for 2:17.13.

Maria's older sister, Irene, was third in 2:17.57 on runs of 1:10.37 and 1:07.20. Erika Hess of Switzerland was fourth in 1:10.75-1:06.96 for 2:17.71, and Christin Cooper of Sun Valley, Idaho, was fifth.

Kathy Kreiner, 22, of Timmins, Ont., the 1976 Olympic GS gold medallist, finished seventh over-all Thursday with a time of 2:18.96.

Wenzel now leads Annemarie Moser-Proell of Austria 300-256 in the over-all point standings and is confident of regaining the title she lost to the Austrian last season.

Moser-Proell had a pair of miserable runs — 1:11.63 and 1:08.18 — for 2:19.81 and 16th place. Neither Wenzel nor Moser-Proell gained any points toward the over-all — Wenzel had all she was allowed from giant slalom, and Moser-Proell was too far back.

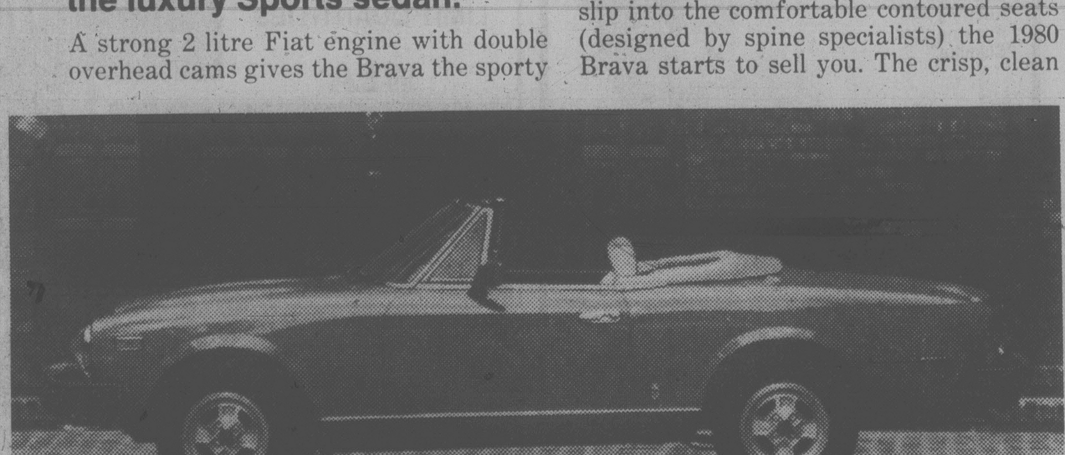
The 1980 FIATS are here

In this economy-conscious age, the beautiful new Fiats deliver the most fun per litre.

A test drive will reveal the kind of performance, ride, acceleration and utter comfort you would expect to pay hundreds, even thousands, of dollars more to enjoy. Visit a Fiat dealer at your earliest opportunity—and enjoy.

The 1980 Fiat Brava, the luxury Sports sedan.

A strong 2 litre Fiat engine with double overhead cams gives the Brava the sporty kind of power that makes this luxury sedan great fun to drive. The moment you slip into the comfortable contoured seats (designed by spine specialists) the 1980 Brava starts to sell you. The crisp, clean dashboard, the large wide windows, the styled steel rally wheels (optional) are typical of the Italian designer flair for combining practicality with delightful good looks.



Both the Brava and the Spider come with a high quality stereo AM/FM radio as standard equipment. Both are covered by Fiat's 2 year/40,000 km power train warranty and 3 year/120,000 km "Weatherguard" anti-corrosion perforation warranty.

The 1980 Fiat Spider 2000, the classic convertible.

This is the sports car design that is too good to tamper with. The engine has been upped to 2 litre power. There is a 5 speed shift for cruising quiet and economy. Justly famous for a top that goes up and down easily. Options; automatic transmission, metallic paint, aluminum wheels.

‘Country first’ for Fratianne

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Linda Fratianne, apparently feeling a surge of patriotism after visiting with President Carter, said Thursday she is going to delay turning professional in order to “represent my country” in the world figure skating championships next month.

“I decided to put my personal feelings aside,” Fratianne, silver medallist at the Lake Placid Olympics, said. “I will be competing for another world championship. Following that, I expect to forego my amateur status.”

The news conference had been billed as one in which Frantianne, 19, would announce “a signing and future career plans,” raising speculation that she was going to say she had joined one of the professional ice shows.

“I decided when I met the president to put my country first,” explained Fratianne. “If I didn’t go to the worlds, we would be represented by only two girls.”

Fratianne, world champion in 1977 and 1979, finished a close second to East German Annette Poetzch at Lake Placid last week after falling behind in the opening round of compulsory figures.

Asked what President Carter had said to her when she and a group of other U.S. Olympians visited the White House after the Olympic Games, Fratianne replied: “He said, ‘I fell in love with your skating.’ ”

Seattle contest postponed

A Western Hockey League game scheduled for Thursday between Seattle Breakers and Portland Winter Hawks at Seattle has been rescheduled to Monday.

No reason for the postponment was given.

No other games were scheduled Thursday.

Action resumes tonight with Billings Bighorns visiting Saskatoon, Calgary at Medicine Hat and Lethbridge Broncos at New Westminster.

Lethbridge will face Victoria Cougars at Memorial Arena Saturday.

Jan prefers to lead

Times News Services

Jan Stephenson is hoping her good start will turn out to be a good omen.

Stephenson knocked six strokes off the 6,154-yard, par 72 Hillcrest course on Thursday to take a one-stroke lead over Jerilyn Britz in the $100,000 Ladies' Professional Golf Association's Sun City (Ariz.) tournament.

“The fact that I'm leading this tournament is almost a totally new experience for me,” Stephenson said. “For once, in my life I got off to a good start and, quite honestly, I really play better when I lead.”

And in Orlando, Fla., long-hitting Dan Pohl, playing in only his second year on the men's PGA tour, blasted a seven-under-par 64 to take a two-stroke lead in the opening round of the $300,000 Bay Hill Classic. The 23-year-old canned seven birdies, an eagle and two bogeys over Arnold Palmer's 7,119-yard, par-71 course.

Two-time PGA winner Leonard Thompson was in second with a five-under 66.

Tunnel vision: piggybacking under water

Universities, Science and Technology Minister Pat McGeer has joined the tunnel boosters.

He said Thursday he can see the day when electric trains will piggyback vehicles under the Strait of Georgia between Vancouver Island and the Lower Mainland.

He said he's monitoring global tunnel-building technology, particularly a new long-distance tunnel linking Japan's two main islands, with a view to building up a store of information.

McGeer said he has no doubt that alternative means of moving large numbers of the people have to be found as the capacity of the ferry system nears saturation.

There are no firm proposals for such a project, he said. But one day, when the technology and economics are right, B.C. will have to consider a tunnel under the sea.

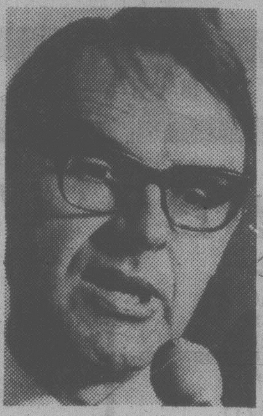
Ideally, the submarine artery would carry high-speed electric trains piggy-backing vehicles, thus avoiding the need for eliminating engine exhaust fumes.

McGeer said there also should be provision for gas and oil pipelines, hydroelectric cables or other specialized corridors.

The method of construction might be similar to the Deas Island link under the Fraser River, in which precast sections of tunnel were made ashore, floated to a point over the intended route, sunk into position on the river bed and connected end-to-end.

That innovative design was built during the tenure of then highways minister Phil Gagliardi, who also proposed a tunnel under the strait. Another former cabinet minister, Sam Bawlf, believes in the tunnel concept of linking Vancouver Island to the Lower Mainland, and in January told the Victoria Chamber of Commerce it would soon become a necessity.

McGeer backs aptitude tests



McGEER
. . . universal truths

The suggestion that B.C. universities stop using aptitude tests as a criterion for selecting students for professional schools, was shot down Thursday by Universities Minister Pat McGeer.

NDP MLA Stuart Leggatt says the validity of standardized aptitude tests has been seriously challenged in the U.S. He calls for a complete review and evaluation of their use in B.C.

McGeer, however, defends the use of such tests.

"Over the years the various aptitude tsts that have been developed have been responsible for a stunning success in predicting how well students will do during their courses and how well they'll do afterwards," the minister said.

Leggatt says consumer advocate Ralph Nader, the American PTA, the U.S. Student Association and the American Education Association all question the effectiveness and accuracy of aptitude tests. He quotes Nader as saying many of these tests have about as much predictive value as a roll of the dice.

Leggatt also says most of the tests used here are U.S.-developed, overwhelmingly American in character and therefore inappropriate to the Canadian experience.

McGeer rejects that argument as well.

"General knowledge is something which is not national. It is international and it relates to truth rather than to politics.

"Language is universal. Science is universal. History is universal. All of these things know no national boundaries," McGeer said.

Learning skills measured by IQ tests

People who believe in IQ tests for children are mistaking intelligence for learning skills, a visiting lecturer said at the University of Victoria this week.

Dr. Denis Stott, professor emeritus at Guelph University and researcher into IQ and achievement testing, was here to address student teachers and psychology students.

In an interview he commented on remarks a few days earlier by a member of the UVic faculty of education, Dr. Hugh Taylor, who advocates a return to IQ testing as a useful tool to indicate how a child will perform later in life.

"When we conceive of intelligence we are not only barking up the wrong tree, but a tree that doesn't exist," Stott said.

"Learning doesn't depend on some mystical quality no psychologist has been able to define. It's the result of how mental powers have been used from birth.

"What we should talk about is mental skills, and why some have more mental skills than others."

Some children use their perceptive powers more than others, and in so doing continue to reinforce and increase them, Stott said.

The child who involves himself with the world, trying to figure things out for himself, gets better and better at it.

"All you're doing when you give an intelligence test is measuring only the point the child has reached in building these skills, not measuring his intelligence."

Learning skills can be taught by exercises and games designed to develop reasoning and mental agility. The effects often show that children thought to be retarded blossom out and it is found they have only been in retreat from learning, Stott said.

Board games, like the Flying Start kits used widely in the UK and becoming known in North America, give to children challenges they feel they can cope with, and their natural impetus to do well emerges, he said.

It is defeatist to perpetuate the concept that success in school is divided between those with brains and those without.

Before the judge

A 24-year-old man convicted following a trial conducted in his absence Wednesday was given a 14-day jail sentence Thursday by Judge Lorne Pearce in provincial court.

Bernie Cameron Thors was found guilty of impaired driving and refusing a breath test demand by police Sept. 27.

Crown counsel Nicholas Lang applied to hold the trial in Thors' absence under a rarely-used section of the Criminal Code which allows trials to proceed ex parte on summary offences if the presiding judge is satisfied a summons or appearance notice was served on the accused. The person must have made a previous appearance in court on the same charge.

Pearce granted the application after hearing that Thors appeared Oct. 11 and a trial was scheduled at that time for Wednesday.

After finding Thors guilty on both charges, Pearce issued a bench warrant for his arrest.

When Thors appeared Thursday, Pearce handed out the 14-day, concurrent sentences.

A 32-year-old man was fined $100 and ordered to pay a company for a log.

Sidney Geoffrey Fry, 2744 Sooke, pleaded guilty to mischief causing wilful damage to a cedar log belonging to the Sooke Logging Division of Pacific Logging Ltd.

Crown counsel Robert Mulligan told Judge William Ostler a patrolling workman spotted Fry about 6:30 a.m. Sept. 30 cutting up a log and loading it on a vehicle. Mulligan said the log was on the logging company's property, and was valued at $380.

Ostler levied the $100 fine, placed Fry on seven months probation, and ordered him to pay for the log.

A 29-year-old man serving a five-month term for trafficking in marijuana had a four-month concurrent term added after pleading guilty to uttering a forged document and false pretences.

Donald Frederick Bethune, who was jailed Jan. 22 by Ostler, had the concurrent term imposed in connection with a $681.85 money order Jan. 4 in Nanaimo and a $50 worthless cheque cashed July 8 in Williams Lake.

Mulligan said the money order was altered from $1.85 to read $681.85 and cashed at the Harborside Villa in Nanaimo.

The $50 cheque was cashed at the hotel in Williams Lake where Bethune was staying.

Defence lawyer Barry Mah Ming said Bethune's tentative release date was May 2 and asked Ostler to impose a sentence which would not affect that.

Andrew Erfle, 57, of 10417 Bowerbank, Sidney, was jailed three months after pleading guilty to impaired driving.

Court was informed Erfle was seen coming out of a hotel parking lot about 1:30 a.m. Jan. 30 by Sidney RCMP and was followed on the Pat Bay Highway before being stopped. Two breath test readings of .16 were obtained.

Fined $400 for impaired driving was William Ronald Phillips, 49, of 2920 Mount Wells.

Police auxiliaries back

Saanich police board has decided to reinstate the police force's 28-member auxiliary unit.

The auxiliaries withdrew their services Dec. 23 after the Workers' Compensation Board refused to provide compensation for a New Westminster auxiliary officer injured while on duty.

Police board chairman Mayor Mel Couvelier said the WCB has now agreed to protect reserve police officers regarding liability claims.

The board will continue to monitor reserve training and activities to ensure no member in placed in jeopardy.

Saanich provides training for all reserves in the Greater Victoria area.

400 prospects for jury duty on pot trial

Close to 400 prospective jurors will be assembled in the Law Courts April 8 for the start of what is expected to be Victoria's longest trial.

Twenty-three men from the United States, Colombia and Costa Rica have been committed for county court jury trial on charges of importing marijuana and possessing marijuana for the purpose of trafficking. Five also have been committed on a charge of conspiracy to import marijuana.

They were arrested following the seizure May 22 of 33 tons of marijuana in Sydney Inlet, 35 miles northwest of Tofino.

The trial is expected to last three months.

The record jury panel, from which the 12 jurors who hear the case will be chosen, is needed because the defence and prosecution may challenge without cause or stand aside more than 300 panelists.

At a pre-trial hearing Thursday before Judge Montague Drake, defence lawyers argued for a separation of the three charges, meaning separate trials, because of questions of admissibility of evidence on different charges particularly with a long and complex trial.

Drake said the charge against five Americans of conspiracy to import marijuana should be separated from the charges against all 23 men of importing and possessing marijuana for the purpose of trafficking.

He said the difficulty of the jury in sorting out evidence which is admissible on one charge but not the other charges was almost insuperable. In addition, the number of accused persons on the conspiracy charge was small.

He ruled the importing and possession for the purpose of trafficking charges could be tried together because these charges could be kept separate and distinct in the minds of a jury.

Crown counsel Gordon Macdonald said it was his intention, subject to any contrary instructions from the department of justice, to go ahead first with the importing and possession for the purpose of trafficking charges.

Rules coming on car chases

Attorney-General Allan Williams has asked the B.C. Police Commission to draw up uniform guidelines for police vehicles involved in chases.

"Various forces have their own guidelines now. We want to make sure they are complete and used throughout the province," Williams said.

B.C. police cars in chase situations have been involved in several fatal accidents in recent years. A Surrey RCMP oficer was acquitted Monday on a charge of dangerous driving laid after a police car rammed a car and killed a man.

Delta Provincial Court Judge John Drysdale strongly criticized the lack of guidelines for police engaged in pursuits.

"I want to make certain there are in place guidelines which are clear and which police officers can understand and can follow," Williams said.

He said the guidelines should allow police the scope to carry out their duties while making certain other people who use the streets are not placed in jeopardy.

Williams said he hopes the guidelines will be ready sometime this spring.

Emotion won't stop us: Perkins

Emotional pleas won't stop the Hospital and Health Planning Commission from building a major obstetrics unit in the new Victoria General Hospital, says chairman Charles Perkins.

Under present commission plans all but emergency obstetric cases would go to the new hospital on Helmcken Road rather than Royal Jubilee or Saanich Peninsula hospitals.

"We want to talk to people about this because we're convinced that this is the only way to go. After all, sacrificing a drive of 10 minutes to be assured of the most modern facilities, a large blood bank and such, really is the soundest approach," Perkins said.

He said most of the opposition to the proposal is based on emotionalism.

The commission, at its meeting this week, received a letter from the Saanich hospital protesting the forthcoming loss of obstetrical service on the peninsula.

The hospital originally was intended to handle only emergency cases but in practice has been doing about 130 a year.

Heritage conference

Thirty heritage conservation branch volunteers will be in Victoria on the weekend for a conference to update them on branch activities.

The volunteers serve as liaison between the government and community on heritage conservation.

Provincial Secretary Evan Wolfe said the local volunteer advisers ensure that the community plays an active role in heritage conservation by monitoring and recording prehistoric and historic sites in the province.

They report vandalism or situations where heritage sites are threatened by land excavation or development.

"The seminar is an excellent opportunity for volunteers to exchange information and devise policies vital to the preservation of heritage in our province," Wolfe said.

Novelist Herbert Gold, in the current issue of American Poetry Review, on the state of marriage: "We marry. Amazing numbers of people marry, the burned and the not yet burned, the twice and thrice burned marry ... And then we fill out our lives together with responsibilities and routines, with days and nights which are sometimes even distracted and bored ... It is one person who submits to passion with close cuddles and shrieks. It is another who discusses carrying out the garbage."

There's such a "strong fascination" about Marlene Dietrich that two free-lance photographers hoisted themselves up on a crane to a fourth-floor window to get her picture. They got slapped with a lawsuit instead. Dietrich sued Bruno Mouron, 25, and Bernard Wiss, 27, for about $7,300 for invasion of privacy.

Ursula Beckley doesn't care how the snake got into the egg. The fact that it came out of the egg she was using to make an omelet is enough and she wants $3.6 million to compensate for the shock. Says Beckley's attorney, Ralph Franco, "She cracked three eggs into a bowl, and a 6-inch snake dropped out of the third egg. She froze and continues to suffer from a severe trauma." He adds the incident put her into psychiatric treatment, and says "she becomes nauseous at the sight of eggs and suffers ... headaches, loss of sleep and loss of appetite." Her Mineola, N.Y., suit names everybody connected with the egg, from the Georgia chicken farm of its origin to the New York grocery store where she bought it.

Tana Andrus, 28-year-old daughter of U.S. Interior Secretary Cecil Andrus, is recuperating in a Boise, Idaho, hospital following a heart attack. She was listed in satisfactory condition in St. Luke's hospital. Andrus said she had no history of heart problems.

Bob Hayes, former Olympian and Dallas Cowboys football star who was once dubbed the world's fastest human, was released from the Texas state prison after serving 10 months on a narcotics conviction. He slipped quietly out of the building before dawn. Prison officials said they have no idea where he has gone. Hayes was sentenced to a maximum five years last April after being convicted of delivering cocaine to an undercover police officer. He became eligible for parole this month.

Dear Abby:

I don't get the newspaper regularly, but I heard you had something in your column about The Living Will. The way it was explained to me, that is exactly what I need to have peace of mind. I am 74, and so many of my friends (and two relatives in the last year) have died lingering deaths because nobody wanted to turn off the machines that kept them alive. There was so much suffering and needless expense for the patient and it was terribly hard on the loved ones.

Exactly what is The Living Will, and how do I get one? Is it euthanasia or mercy killing?

Reader

Dear Reader:

The Living Will is a document stating that should you fall victim to a terminal illness from which there is no hope for your recovery, you instruct your physician not to prolong your life by artificial means, such as machines, tubes, pumps, etc.

Copies of this document may be given to your physician, clergyman, lawyer and to as many family members and friends as you desire. To sign such a document, you must be 19 or older and of sound mind. (If at any time you wish to revoke the document, you are free to do so.)

It is not euthanasia or mercy killing! There is a clear distinction between actively killing a person and "allowing him to die."

The Living Will does not give anyone permission to end the life of another in a mercy-killing manner. It is simply a document that one signs, stating that he (or she) does not want to have his (or her) life prolonged artificially after the physician decides that there is no hope for recovery.

The Living Will is a consideration if your values include reflection on the quality of life.

I have signed such a document. You may get one by writing to Concern for Dying, 250 W. 57th St., New York, N.Y. 10019. The document is free, but please send a donation for the cost of printing and mailing the document to you. I sent $10 for six documents and have given one to my physician, clergyman, lawyer and members of my family.

Dear Abby:

All those folks who write to ask if they should report suspected infidelities among their neighbors remind me of an incident which happened here.

A partner occasionally jumped the marital fence and strayed into fresh pastures. The spouse was tolerant of these actions because otherwise the person was kind, thoughtful and loving.

One day a blabbermouth phoned the spouse and said, "I think you should know that your dear one was seen coming out of your neighbor's apartment!"

The spouse replied, "Don't be jealous, there'll be a knock at your door pretty soon."

NFB world image hits home

By LON WOOD

Some day soon a group of Vietnamese refugees living in Victoria will sit down to view an assortment of National Film Board titles — all in Cantonese.

"They are all learning English, but it will be kind of fun for them to hear their language again — especially when it will also help them learn more about Canada," says Wally Lee, manager of the NFB's Victoria lending branch at 811 Wharf St.

"A lot of people don't associate us with much beyond French or English," he said. "But abroad we've been telling Canada's story to the rest of the world in 60 languages."

Lee joined the NFB 30 years ago when it was 10 years old. He has been in Victoria four years. Before that he worked overseas in NFB distrias well as in Canada.

"A lot of people aren't familiar we have all this activity abroad," he told the Times Thursday. "My own experiences with the NFB have been in Chicago, New York, London, Paris . . .

"One assignment was out of New Delhi. My beat was from Pakistan in the east to the Orient at the other end — plus there were assignments in Sweden and other parts of Europe, Australia and so on.

"The job was always distribution — taking the films we make — which I think are absolutely fantastic — and connecting them with people. The idea is not just distributing tins."

The film board's international reputation has served it well in recent years. With the opening of China came an invitation from that country's leaders for an NFB crew to go there and shoot footage of Chinese life.

The result is in the 1½-hour film North China Commune which is being shown free of charge this coming Monday, March 3 at the McPherson Playhouse.

"This film is superb," says Lee. "It really has the classic NFB touch — wow!

"This showing is being backed by us and the McPherson Foundation. There are two sittings of more than 800 people each. Tickets for the 7:15 show are all gone but you can still pick up those for the one at 9:15 — at the McPherson or the NFB office."

All Vancouver Island is Lee's bailiwick now and he has just returned from a workshop in Port Hardy and Port McNeill. While the Island doesn't offer all the contrasts he saw overseas, there's plenty of variety in the requests he handles.

"Yesterday a women phoned and asked for films on flowers; lately we've been getting requests for footage on aging and dying. On the latter, we'll soon be getting The Last Days of Living, which was produced by an NFB crew who spent 30 days in the palliative unit of a Montreal hospital.

"We are in contact with doctors and psychologists with films on child abuse, and we work very closely with the University of Victoria, Malaspina and so on for everything from science to film festivals . . ."

(During Thursday's interview a three-person television crew from UVic was taping activity at the Wharf Street office.)

The Victoria office's best attribute — and sometimes its least known — is that it hands out 16mm films free; like library books; no charge.

"If there is such a thing as a government-looking office, this wouldn't be it," says Lee. "What we have here are two libraries of films.

"The first is simply called the Self Serve library. What happens is, people come down and browse through racks of films — instead of books, they're films. And you can take any six you want for three days. It's a quick turnover library so more people can share the films."

Last year the Victoria office — one of 29 in Canada — distributed 20,000 films, making it one of the most active branches on a per capita basis in Canada.

When people first come into the office they are astonished to find they can help themselves, says Lee.

"We often have Americans who come in during the summer to introduce themselves — they know all about NFB films," he said. "When they see the Self Serve they are absolutely astonished. They say, 'Don't people take the films and walk out with them and not bring them back?'

"I tell them we have no problem with theft or abuse. Every film is brought back. Then they are cleaned, minor repairs if necessary . . .

"The other library is the Reserve Library — a pretty prosaic term, but a pretty exciting library. Here, you reserve films, booking them as far ahead as 60 days. If you live in town, you just pick them up and away you go. Anywhere out of reach on the Island we send them prepaid parcel post — with return parcel post the only cost to the user."

There are over 3,000 films in both libraries and more and more of these are being borrowed by individuals and families — rather than just groups and organizations.

"A couple came in here and said 'Hey! Film board! We're getting pretty tired of television.' We turned them loose and now they come in twice a week for films — they haven't taken the projector off the dining room table since they first came in. And they are contantly raving about the incredible discovery they made; the range and why we're doing all this."

Lee's answer is simple:

"It's the National Film Board, headquarters Montreal, a federal agency — we're all paying for it and its job since inception 40 years ago in the words of founder John Grierson, "You should be interpreting Canada to Canadians . . . making films in the national interest."

The four-person Victoria staff does everything it can to streamline the film lending service so that more people can share the films, says Lee. To this end, there is a small headphone-equipped projector for film previewing and a 40-seat theatre used by professional and educational groups for specialty showings at Lee's invitation.

While "free films" would be tagged as frills by some, Lee strongly defends their basic worth.

"Teachers take their kids to the museum and the art gallery," he said. "Continue doing that — but remember also that there's the corner film board. It's not just filling time — we're not into filling time — it is important. And it doesn't have to be didactic. If you can turn them on to film board and documentaries, then what's wrong with that?"

Recently a group of Sooke students toured the NFB office.

"They wrote thank you letters and did little drawings of how they saw what in our office — it was marvellous."

Got a projector?

Free films are fine, but what if you don't have access to $1,000 to $1,500 worth of movie projection equipment through your company, club, school or church group?

Rentals of 16mm projectors are possible through the following photographic shops — with prices ranging from $12.50 to $15 per day:

The Greater Victoria Public Library, which has over 600 films as well as slides and 8mm films, rents projectors for $10 per day with rentals of their films only. The library's 16mm collection rents at $2 per 30 minutes running time with bookings made at least a day — and anywhere up to two months — in advance.

Vegetarianism is a viable alternative

By DR. L.L. COLEMAN

Our daughter is a junior at college. For the past two years she has become a total vegetarian. When I hear a description of what she eats, I worry about it because I feel her diet must be inadequate. Even though she seems to be in good health my concern is, will such a rigid diet take its toll later on?

Mrs. C.H.

Dear Mrs. H.:

Hundreds of thousands of young adults throughout North America have, in recent years, adopted the idea of vegetarianism. There are those who consider themselves "complete" vegetarians. These people eat no meat, no fish, no poultry, no eggs and no milk products. The "lactovegetarians" do eat milk products, but do not eat eggs. The "lacto-ovo-vegetarians" eat eggs in addition to milk, butter and cheese.

Through scientific studies in various parts of the country, it has been established that nutritional deficiencies almost never occur except in the case of "complete" vegetarians.

Amino acids are closely related to protein, which is essential for good health. Milk products, meat, fish and eggs supply adequate amounts of these essential amino acids. Vegetable proteins also contain many of the amino acids. Whole wheat cereals, beans, peas, lentils and nuts can usually provide high quality protein that can be comparable to that derived from animal protein.

It is believed that "complete" vegetarians may be deficient in the B12 vitamin (cyano-cobalamin). It is suggested, therefore, that those on a rigid vegetarian regime should take B12 supplements.

Complete vegetarians sometimes impose their diets on their children. Recently, the scientific literature has pointed out some adverse effects of extreme diets on infants and children. Nutritional deficiencies, malnutrition and rickets have all been reported in children who are on severely limited diets.

Your daughter seems to be flourishing on the diet she is on. A blood study for the possibility of anemia will probably be normal, yet it will serve to give you added assurance.

Dear Doctor:

After I gave birth to my second child, I developed a milk cyst of the breast. I am well now, but I would like to know if this condition can ever become cancerous.

Mrs. N.H.E.

Dear Mrs. E.:

A milk cyst, or "galactocele," occurs only occasionally among women who have just given birth to a child. Most of them are readily controlled. Rarely is surgery necessary.

Creative aid sought

Volunteering offers many opportunities for creative endeavour. People with special interests and abilities in the arts will find a variety of volunteer positions that require their services. the level of expertise is determined by the job itself. Agencies need talented amateurs and enthusiasts as well as those people with more formal training. Some projects are short term and will add to a developing portfolio. Others are continuous and may provide the volunteer with valuable experience and training. Craftspeople, writers, graphic artists, and entertainers are only a few who should seriously consider these and other volunteering opportunities.

A nature centre is preparing a major program on natural history and needs display artists to design and make its displays. They are planning both graphic and three-dimensional presentations and will provide all materials. Volunteers could work at home or at the centre, and the times are flexible. They are also seeking writers and researchers to produce written pamphlets and research materials. Times are flexible, but they need a minumum commitment of three months. Orientation will be provided.

A musical theatre group is interested in finding volunteers who will help backstage, in the ticket office, and on fund raising projects. There are many possibilities for volunteers here, and it could become a regular volunteer job.

An information centre that specializes in working with recently widowed women is seeking a sign painter who will prepare posters and related materials to advertise an upcoming campaign. The volunteer should have some experience in lettering and design.

A local safety council needs help with public relations and promotions. They would like two people with artistic ability to arrange displays. They also require graphic artists to design and make posters and display materials.

An activity centre working with the emotionally disabled is looking for a drama enthusiast to become involved in reading plays with a small group. The volunteer would arrange to get copies of plays and encourage participation of group members. The volunteer should have some experience in drama, and have a patient, friendly temperment. This group also publishes a newsletter and would like help with editing, preparation and the active encouragement of residents' participation.

Several residential hospitals are eager to hear from entertainers. Musicians, dancers, bands, theatre groups, singers, and puppeteers are all welcome. These volunteers should be aware of the special requirements of performing in an institutional setting. But be assured that eager audiences await!

A cable television outlet in the Western Community is seeking volunteers to become involved in camera work, using microphones for interviews, setting up stage lighting, shooting on location, editing and production of programs. They prefer area residents, but will be happy to hear from any interested volunteers. The job is flexible and some training will be provided.

These are just a few of the volunteer positions open to the creative volunteer. There is a great need for people with crafts experience to come forward and share their skills. The many facets of volunteering may spark some inspiration, but it will certainly provide a chance to practice skills and hone that creative edge. For information on these and other positions contact the Victoria Volunteer Bureau at 386-2269 from 8:30 to 4:30 p.m. on weekdays.

Dear Mike: There seems to be very poor communiction between the gas pedal and the engine of may 1978 Nova 6. I can push down gently on the gas and nothing happens. I push a little harder and finally the engine starts to respond. But there's a very definite lag and a feeling that something's loose. What gives? — Nova Caine.

Dear Caine: If your Nova has cable linkage to the carburetor, it sometimes happens that one end of the cable housing works loose. That can cause the lag you describe. If the car uses rod linkage, a pivot or end can similarly come loose. Another possibility is that the gas pedal itself isn't firmly attached to the floor, but when that happens your foot usually feels it wobble from side to side. In any case, you ought to get the problem remedied, because if your linkage lets go completely, you'll either have a wide-open throttle or no engine response at all.

Dear Mike: I'm retired, and although I own a good car that's in fine shape mechanically, I don't drive it much anymore. The car is garaged for weeks at a time. My question is this. Should I let the engine run every once in a while, or will this do more harm than good? Please advise.

Dear Retired: I'd suggest that you do start the engine about once a week. Be sure to move the car out of the garage to avoid carbon-monoxide poisoning. With the emergency brake firmly set, let your engine run at a fast idle for at least 15 minutes. that way it'll warm enough to burn off condensed moisture and raw fuel in the crankcase. You might also consider buying a trickle charger to keep up the battery. Trickle chargers cost only about $10 at stores like Sears, Penneys, etc., and if you hook your charger up once a month and let it charge overnight, you can prolong the life of your battery enough to make up for the charger's cost. And you won't have to worry about a dead battery.

Dear Mr. Vichert: I am depressed. I am a 16-year-old girl and I met a super guy who is 17. He started waiting for me after every class and we were getting along fine. Here's the problem. Last week he didn't even talk to me and started liking another girl. I don't know why he "dumped" me. Then the other day, he started talking to me again. I still like him bit I don't know what to do. Should I talk to him even though he is with another girl?

Answer: Keep talking, especially if you are willing to ask him what made him behave the way he did, and what kind of a relationship he would like to have. I think it is important to check with people when their behaviour changes suddenly. Your depression, caused because you don't know or understand what is happening, can be cleared up by asking some straightforward questions. If you don't like the answers, tell him.

Dear Dr. Levine: Remember that letter you got from the 12-year-old who despised her father? Well, I'm the older of those four girls (she's the second youngest) and I'm writing because I want to clear up some things.

First, my dad isn't a total lazy slob. Sure he is as lazy as lazy can be but he does a few things (mowing the lawn, driving the family, buying things for himself and us).

I don't like him but down deep we all love him. You can love someone and not like them, right? A divorce would do no good because I don't want to see my mother hurt by a permanent separation.

My mom told me a little about dad's background. When he was young his parents stayed together for one reason — their two children. My grandfather was always bossing my grandmother around. I know my grandmother is a real worry wart, but she doesn't deserve the treatment she receives. I just have to say that my grandfather and grandmother — I love both dearly — do not like each other.

Does this change your reply to my younger sister? Do you still think the same action should be taken? Please let me, I mean us, know.

Answer: I'm glad you took the time to write because it shows it is difficult to draw firm conclusions on the basis of these letters. There is so much more unwritten than is written. This is not a plea for longer letters, but a word of advice lest you expect too much from our answers.

More important, your letter shows that by knowing more about a person's background, you begin to understand the "whys" of the behaviour. It might not make you like the actions any more, but you may judge them with more compassion or tolerance.

We also see an example of two sisters growing up in the same family, each seeing things differently. This is not unusual. Sometimes it's as if they are talking about two entirely different families. In your case, it may be because your sister is younger. We shouldn't forget that one person's perception may be different than another's.

Dear Dr. Powell: Can a 14-year-old boy get a girl pregnant? I am scared to death but my boyfriend said he couldn't father a child for another few years because his semen isn't strong enough. True?

Answer: A 14-year-old can make a girl pregnant. A boy begins to develop the potential in his early teens and it is quite possible he has matured enough to get you pregnant. Rather than take his word, go to a clinic and talk to a counsellor.

You can use a method of contraception to prevent a pregnancy but you need help in answering other questions. If both of you talked to the counsellor you might decide neither of you is old enough to accept the responsibility of having sex.

Young readers' questions on human relations and sex are answered by a panel including Marion Powell, physician; Graham Cotter, clergyman; Dr. Saul Levine, psychiatrist, and social worker Bruce Vichert.

Send questions to Youth Clinic, The Victoria Times, 2621 Douglas St., Victoria V8W 2N4. Readers wishing to talk with someone about their problems can call NEED at 386-6233.

SHAPE UP FOR SPRING WITH THE HELP OF THE no nonsense DIET

In May of 1979 Natures own no nonsense diet was introduced to British Columbians and Albertans through the Prince Health Food chain. Within weeks they were sold out and by the end of July thousands of people had lost weight the no nonsense way.

Unlike most diets to have come along this one is not dying out, but gaining greater momentum all the time. The reason for this phenomenal growth lies inthe fact that those people who have tried the diet have gotten positive results. For example I know of one particular young lady who has been overweight nearly all of her life. She wanted desperately to lose 25 lbs., and tried every possible means over the last two years. She exercised, joined clubs and went to monthly meetings. All to no avail. After reading about the no nonsense diet, she decided to give it a try before throwing in the towel. It worked. Within a month she lost 23 lbs., within two more weeks she lost another 10 lbs. She is so ecstatic about this diet that she preaches it to anyone who will listen and has most of her friends on it.

The product is a dieter's dream; two tablespoons in a glass of partially skimmed milk is equal in nutrition to a complete meal. But without all those nasty little calories. It has all the essential amino acids, and Vitamins and Minerals in a delicious powder base. The no nonsense formula comes in two flavours, luscious chocolate and tasty vanilla.

Here is a list of the Vitamins and Minerals it contains:

Vitamin A Thiamin
Choline
Iodine
Potassium
Vitamin E
Riboflavin
Calcium Magnesium
Manganese
Vitamin C
Niacin B6, B12
Phosphorous
Copper
Sodium
Vitamin D
Folid Acid Biotin
Iron
Zinc
d-Panothenic Acid

This is a wonderful diet because you are dealing with natural foods and not drugs, consequently it is safe and very healthy. A lot of people after going on this diet, have noticed remarkable improvement in their hair, skin and nails.

The no nonsense diet is Distributed by Superior Natural Formulas Ltd. and is available

UVic prof's in Harmonie

A musical concept brought back from Europe by University of Victoria School of Music professor Jesse Read, will be introduced to the public here in several forthcoming concerts.

Read, a bassoonist, spent a year's leave in 1978 studying in the baroque and classical field. In the course of these studies he played many concerts with a group in Switzerland. The ensemble performed music of the period on classical instruments borrowed from museums.

On his return to Victoria, Read formed a group of wind players of similar character under the classic title, Harmonie. The group, pictured left, performs in 18th century costumes and wigs, but uses modern instruments.

Harmonie will be featured March 9 and 10, in the final pair of faculty concerts in the UVic Music Building recital hall. On March 16 they will be performing at Pearson College.

Read says the formation of a wind octet for pairs of oboes, clarinets, horns and bassoons became popular during the earliest days of the clarinet. In the 18th century it was one of the preferred court ensembles, invariably known as Harmonie.

At that time opera was such a popular genre that many composers rewrote parts of their operatic compositions for wind bands or farmed out the re-writing to other composers.

Beethoven wrote a set of variations on the familiar aria from Don Giovanni, La ci darem la mano, using two oboes and English horn (similar to an oboe but pitched one-fifth lower). These variations are included in Harmonie's forthcoming programs.

Singer to solo with symphony

One of those somewhat rare occasions comes up this weekend when Victoria Symphony Orchestra presents a singer as its guest soloist. The Sunday and Monday concerts will feature Canadian mezzo soprano Carrol Anne Curry in a performance of Poulenc's La Voix Humaine.

There is also a guest conductor for this pair. Widely known Canadian conductor Boris Brott will be on the podium and will conduct, in addition to the Poulenc, Beethoven's Eroica Symphony.

Brott was the innovative conductor responsible for the remarkable development of the Hamilton Philharmonic. He has also been assistant conductor of the New York Philharmonic under Leonard Bernstein. He is well known for his work on radio and television both in Canada and Britain.

Curry is a leading member of the Canadian Opera Company with which she has sung many principal roles. She has sung in Britain where she made a critically aclaimed recital debut at Wigmore Hall and has performed as oratorio soloist and in opera.

In her Symphony appearance she will sing a work which she did with outstanding success in Toronto. La Voix Humaine is acutally an opera in one act with one character. The soloist portrays a rejected woman in a telephone conversation with her faithless lover.

The Eroica is one of the most admired and loved of Beethoven's nine symphonic works and was his own favorite throughout most of his life.

Concerts are Sunday at 2:30 p.m. and Monday at 8 p.m. at the Royal Theatre.

Living out of suitcases

Travelling is costing us more all the time. So when we uncover a way to save money, it helps.

If you only take one trip annually, you might be very reluctant to put out money for luggage that will sit in a closet for 50 weeks out of the year.

Now there is an outfit that will rent you any kind of suitcase you want for the flat price of $8.50 a week. That means anything from a carryon to a 26-inch monster. The price stays the same. All the luggage is Samsonite.

This rental service is the brainchild of Ron Caisley, a young Toronto man. And while he's just starting out in the Golden Horseshoe area of Ontario, he's looking for people who would take on a franchise in cities across Canada.

Ron gave the example of a dry cleaner, who could use it as an added service to his customers and make a little extra money. You could even start up in your own basement. You'd have to decide for yourself if you would earn enough money to make it worthwhile.

The business in Toronto started a few months ago and already a man in Newfoundland has taken on a franchise for all of Atlantic Canada. Recently a man from Owen Sound took on a franchise for his area.

So the idea is spreading. Before too long most of us may be able to rent a suitcase.

Some travel agents are also tied in to Caisley's small network, so you might ask about renting a suitcase when you book your ticket. Some of the agents will offer a pick up and delivery service. Others will operate depots where you go in and choose what you want.

Believe it or not, many travellers want a case that's made a few trips so that they don't look like novice travellers.

"Luggage Lending" fumigates and sterilizes each suitcase after each trip, and puts a fresh disposable liner inside.

If the case gets damaged, the consumer is not charged. But if you lose it, you pay for it. (That's because the airline will reimburse you, not Luggage Lending.)

It's a good idea for the once-a-year traveller. But some seasoned plane and train hoppers rent too. Sometimes they need an extra case. Sometimes a trip comes up unexpectedly, and a consumer finds himself with a broken lock or handle on his own case that he hasn't had time to repair. So he rents.

If you rent for a week, and decide to stay a month, that adds up. You can apply the rental fee against the purchase of the case.

If you want more information about Luggage Lending, write to the home base at 2039 Yonge Street, Toronto, M4S 2A2.

What will a booming rental business do to luggage sales?

"We're not worried," said Carol Doan of Samsonite. "I doubt it will cut into sales very much. Many people prefer not to use a suitcase someone else has used. Also, many like to keep up with fashion, and consider the suitcase as important to looking fashionable."

The purchasing customer would have a greater selection of styles than one who wanted to rent.

Whether you are renting or buying a suitcase, you want to be sure it will survive the treatment it will get by the baggage handlers.

Air Canada spokesman John Cavill estimates that airline handled over 16 million bags in 1978. Even at the best of times, you can be sure your bags will get rougher treatment once you check them than the worst you would do yourself.

"We paid out $2.5 million in baggage claims last year," said Cavill. Not all of that was for damage done directly by baggage handlers. In fact, sometimes other customers are responsible.

"In one case recently, someone checked a box, tied up with rope, that contained a dozen jars of molasses, but that's not what they indicated to us. During handling, the jars broke, and damage caused by the leaking molasses to other bags nearby was tremendous."

That customer had violated two of the most important rules for successful travel: use sturdy containers, and don't pack anything breakable in your checked luggage.

Cavill says, "Luggage should not be purchase as a status symbol. Get a practical piece of equipment that will protect the contents. A pink leather bag, for example, is going to get scuffed."

The customer might think it has been ruined, but Air Canada won't replace it.

"There is debate over whether soft-sided luggage is as good as hard sides. Generally, we recommend that regular or frequent travellers should buy hard-sided cases, but the soft-sided products are fine for other travellers."

Reinforced corners are "good for your bags, but not so nice for the bags around it — especially soft-sided bags that might tear," Cavill warned.

What about zippers? "They're fine as long as they hold up. But when the zipper breaks, it is very difficult to re-secure the bag." Other types of closures are easier to keep secured if they break.

Locks are important too. Not only do they assist in security, they also help keep the bag shut. A suitcase lock is not foolproof, of course, and many locks can be opened by the same key. Combination locks are a somewhat better foil, but don't forget the combination!

The place to carry perishables, breakables and valuables is in your carry-on bag. It must be no larger than 23cm x 41cm x 61cm to fit under the seat.

Renting three bags at $8.50 per week for two weeks would cost you $51. You would be fortunate to purchase three equivalent bags for less than $150.

Figure out for yourself what your needs are. Once you've made up your mind, you might find helpful a Samsonite booklet called the Travellers Handbook. It gives some advice on what to take and how to pack it. The booklet is available in English or French, and it's free. Write to Samsonite, 753 Ontario Street, Stratford, Ontario, N5A 3J9.

Ad style 'is out'

CALGARY (CP) — Sex in advertising is all right, but treating women as "creatures dominated by their mammary glands" is out, women's advocate Pat Preston told a meeting of the Calgary Advertising and Sales Club Thursday.

Preston is the Alberta executive member for the National Action Committee on the Status of Women.

She raked the advertisers over verbal coals for depicting women as drudges, comforters or seducers wending their coy way through life with "smiles and snivels."

Some audience members squirmed in their seats as they watched her slide show depicting advertising's obsession with the female breast, but one man asked, "What's wrong with that?"

Preston gave a similar talk at the Institute of Canadian Advertising convention in Ottawa last year and received much more hostility in return.

A growing population of media-aware women will not stand for being treated as protective mothers, seductive sex objects, scrubbing housewives or nagging mother-in-laws, none of whom would exist without husbands, she said.

"I wish they'd have put the extra day in the summer."

Contract Bridge ♠♥♦♣ B. Jay Becker

You are South and the bidding has gone:

North	East	South	West
1◇	Pass	1♠	Pass
2◇	Pass	2♡	Pass
2♠	Pass	?

What would you bid now with each of the following four hands?

1. ♠ KQJ9 ♡ KJ82 ◇ 73 ♣ AJ6
2. ♠ K8753 ♡ AJ54 ◇ — ♣ J762
3. ♠ AQ98 ♡ AJ95 ◇ QJ73 ♣ 10
4. ♠ AKJ82 ♡ KQ73 ◇ 6 ♣ A73

1. Three notrump. The moment your partner opens the bidding you should treat this as a game-going hand. The only problem is to find the best contract. Your first two responses were directed toward locating a major suit fit; partner could have held either four spades or four hearts.

But now that you know this is not the case, it is best to try for game in notrump. You realize that partner has at most three spades, so it becomes undesirable to attempt a spade game when the opponents are known to have at least six spades.

2. Pass. Game prospects are very poor, considering partner's signoff bid of two diamonds and his belated spade preference. You should therefore be willing to settle for a part-score contract.

3. Five diamonds. Despite your partner's discouraging rebids of two diamonds and two spades, there is still a good chance for a slam. You should therefore do everything possible to encourage North to bid it.

Your leap to five diamonds guarantees a singleton (or void) in clubs, as well as good trump support. If North holds:

♠ K53 ♡ 6 ◇ AK9852 ♣ J43

he should have no compunctions about bidding six, even with his minimum opening values. But if his hand consists of:

he should pass with alacrity because his king of clubs is not worth much facing a singleton or a void.

4. Three clubs. You have a good chance for a slam here also — this time in spades — but once again you should not make the final decision yourself. North might have values where you don't need them, and lack values where you do need them, in which case a slam could work our very poorly. You therefore consult partner by making a cuebid in clubs.

How far you go depends on what partner does next. North will know from your cuebid that you are angling for a spade slam, and he will presumably react accordingly. If he shows a lack of interest by bidding either three diamonds or three notrump, you will have to settle for only a game in spades. But if North cooperates by making a constructive bid over three clubs, you should head directly for a slam in spades.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Your perceptiveness soars to 'new heights.' Means you know what is to occur and you can choose right person for task at hand. Trust your own judgment. Make necessary changes. Look to future, avoid brooding about past. Gemini, Virgo, Sagittarius persons figure prominently.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): What seemed a failure may turn out to be a victory. Know it and be optimistic. Family member ceases 'badgering' and becomes a staunch ally. Another Taurus, a Libra and Scorpio figure in scenario. You'll feel revitalized.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Be aware of basic values, including land, home, special collections. Hobby could be transformed into profitable enterprise. Maintain self-esteem. Nip in bud any tendency to brood. Exhibit confidence and enthusiasm. Someone important is 'watching you.'

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Accent on ideas, short trips, communications from relatives, ability to bring priorities into focus. See places and people as they are, not through haze of wishful thinking. Another Cancer and a Capricorn figure prominently. Investment is due to pay dividends.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Finish rather than initiate project. Perceive picture as a whole, not in bits and pieces. Added recognition is on horizon. Know it, prepare 'acceptance speech.' Let go of losing proposition. Solid profit results if you carry through on campaign.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Emphasis on greater independence, initiative, originality and pinpoint timing. Trust your own judgment, intuition. Highlight personality, make special appearances and personally explain aspirations to one who can get 'ball rolling.'

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Clandestine meeting proves beneficial. Cancer, Leo, Aquarius persons figure prominently. Accent on behind scenes manoeuvres. You gain access to 'inside information.' A secret is revealed and you benefit from it.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Pressures are relieved — laughter replaces gloom. Lunar emphasis on fulfilled desires, financial gain, boost in career and romantic interlude. Gemini, Sagittarius persons figure in 'happy scenario.' Expand base of operations.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Steady pace is essential. Superior wants to make room for you at top. Know it and respond accordingly. Scorpio, Aquarius persons figure prominently. Accent on prestige, career, reputation and honor. You're complimented on integrity.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Be analytical. Refuse superficial explanations. Be ready for change, travel, variety. Outline long-range plans. Open lines of communication. Emphasis on publishing, education, special reading material and spiritual insight. Gemini, Virgo, Sagittarius persons play key roles.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 29-Feb. 18): Emphasis on mystery, solution of long-standing problem. One close to you confides financial dilemma. Don't cast first stone. You receive unusual gift, proposal. Major adjustment due in connection with lifestyle, residence.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): If discreet, you multiply benefits. Otherwise, you create aura of resentment. Another Pisces and a Virgo figure prominently. Listen to those with opposing views; obtain well-rounded picture. Be definite concerning objectives.

IF MARCH 1 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you are sensitive, temperamental, independent, original, creative, stubborn and 'spoiled' by the opposite sex. Leo, Aquarius persons play important roles in your life. April might be your most memorable month of 1980, a year in which legal complications finally are erased. You'll feel more secure and your objectives will be clearly defined. You are precient, capable of knowing when something of importance is to occur.

FUN WITH FIGURES

By J. A. H. HUNTER

Doug was looking down over Jim's shoulder. "That's my new Permit number," he said. "Is there something odd about it?"

The boy pointed. "Quite a lot, Dad," he replied. "If you subtract the square of its last pair of digits from the square of the other two you get seven less than the number, and you always say seven's lucky."

What was the number?

Thanks for idea to P. C. Mehta, Toronto, Ontario.

Notable flying in for Bastion's Cat

When Cat On a Hot Tin Roof opens Friday at McPherson Playhouse, Bastion Theatre will be featuring still another notable member of the Canadian acting profession.

His name is Henry Beckman and his present base is Los Angeles. He has appeared in more than 500 television shows, nine Broadway productions, numerous films, and over 50 stock and touring productions in Canada and the United States.

In Cat he plays the major role of Big Daddy.

Beckman was previously seen here in 1974 as Willie Loman in the Theatre New Brunswick production of Death of a Salesman. On two occasions he has been chosen for the Canadian Film Best Supporting Actor Award for his roles in Blood and Guts and Why Rock the Boat. Recently he has been selected for a third nomination, this time for his role in The Brood, recently released in the United States. He is also an author, having published a book entitled How to Sell Your Film Project.

Lally Cadeau and Robin Ward in the roles of Maggie and Brick, will be familiar to Bastion audiences from previous productions. Among Victoria actors in principal roles are Myra Benson and John Krich. Also in the cast are Stuart Kent, Ricky MacBride, Peggy Mahon, Robin Marshall, Mia Monsur, Michelle Monsour, Miche Shepherd and four-year-old Blueberry Sunshine an engaging Victoria tot chosen through audition.

The director is Ron Ulrich and the designer, Ed Kotanen.

Early indications of new box office records for the Bastion production of Deathtrap, have now been confirmed. Attendance was up 10 per cent from the previous record-setting production of Life With Father, reaching a total of 11,345 people.

To date, 38,900 patrons have attended Bastion productions, with two productions remaining in the season. In comparison, in the 1978-79 season, a total audience figure of 49,817 was achieved.

Bastion manager Eric Macdonald attributes this growth in audience and revenues to a number of factors in addition to providing the Victoria region audiences with the type and quality of entertainment they are seeking.

General community participation and awareness of cultural activities is on the increase, he comments, pointing to the phenomenally successful seasons of other cultural groups, especially the Victoria Symphony and Belfry Theatre, as proof.

The trend saw an average of more than 1,000 people per night attending a performing arts event in Victoria during the first half of February, he says.

Sleep on dear good mother, it has been long years

Since you left our hearts filled with sadness and tears

Yours was a heart that was blithesome
and gay

Scattering sunshine all along the way

You know how we love you and, yes,
love you yet

Though God took you from us, we cannot forget.

God in his wisdom has recalled

The boon his love had given

And though the body
slumbers here

The soul is safe in heaven.

11 resign at Soviet embassy

MOSCOW (AP) — Eleven of the 35 Soviet employees working for the Canadian embassy in Moscow have resigned since the beginning of this year, an embassy spokesman said.

He said the embassy has applied for replacements through the state-run Administration for Service to the Diplomatic Corps, but that the agency has not yet provided the new Soviet personnel.

The spokesman declined to speculate on whether the spate of resignations was linked to Canada's expulsion of three Soviet personnel on spying charges. The three were expelled from Ottawa on Jan. 21.

Egg cartons make great seed beds

hilda beastall

With the advent of March, home gardeners are giving more thought on how an early start can be made to have strong young plants ready for putting outdoors when the time comes. March is a good month for the raising of seedlings indoors, for sunlight is more powerful, thus growing is promoted more quickly. And April cannot be far behind with the possibilities for putting out the hardiest of the plants.

The small number of vegetable plants for instance, wanted by most families for the first planting of cauliflower and cabbage, broad beans and green peas, are not beyond the skill of a beginner for starting in the house on a windowsill.

Youngesters will be interested in a project which uses the theme of recycling, now that it is part of classroom talk. Egg cartons of either the plastic or the compressed cardboard type make ideal containers for a dozen of so seeds to be sprouted and grown to sturdy two-leaf size with the egg section full of strong roots.

Kept in good light with not more watering than is needed for survival, the young plants will be strong enough to go outdoors with a minimum of protection as the weather gradually becomes more settled.

The pressed cardboard type is favored over the plastic egg carton, though the plastic lids are useful too as will be seen later.

The cardboard absorbs some of the soil moisture for use around developing roots, yet the surplus will seep through the bottom in time. This is where a plastic top section comes in handy. But set the first cardboard egg section into a second cardboard bottom to give rigidity, then put the two into a plastic bottom. They may not fit snug which is all to the good; surplus moisture will have a small space in the plastic where it acts as a tiny reservoir for the emerging rootlets to draw on as they force their way through the saturated cardboard section.

This prevents rapid drying and does away with frequent watering which is all to the good when seedlings are being raised.

Small seeds such as cabbage, cauliflower and others of the cabbage family are still large enough to be grown only two in each egg section. After germination, remove the weaker seedling to allow space for ample root development of the one remaining. Cutting off the unwanted seedling with scissors is safer than pulling it out, which may upset the remaining root system.

By the time these seedlings have been gradually hardened-off (accustomed to cooler outdoor conditions) each egg section will be cut out (or perhaps gently pulled apart) with the cardboard attached to the tight root systems, and the whole thing transplanted outdoors to where the plant will continue growing to usable size.

Soil mixtures for sowing seeds in small containers need to have some humus material and some drainage material such as sand or similar. But don't add fertilizer; there is time enough for adding fertilizer when the plants are well established outdoors and are about half grown. Seed composts are now available for apartment dwellers from garden suppliers and garden shops. Gardeners with their own compost heap will find black soil near the bottom of last year's heap. Get some out this weekend, screen it and have it ready for mixing as needed.

For the whole cabbage family, including sprouts, broccoli, kale and every type and color of cabbage, the use of a dusting of hydrated lime in the seeding soil and again at every stage of transplanting later, is an easy wa to prevent the common disease of the cabbage family called Clubroot.

This is a thickening of the root which stops normal growth and is highly contagious to other members of the whole cabbage tribe. It takes years to get rid of it once started, but the prevention is easily taken care of by the use of the precautionary dusting of lime around the roots of every seedling and every plant belonging to the cabbage family. The amount on the tip of a knife blade is enough for dusting into each egg section of the carton.

Have the soil mixture damp before using, then sow seeds, cover lightly with soil; gently press to make contact between seed and soil.

Cover with lid of carton until white seed tops can be seen in about five to seven days. Keep carton on windowsill during day, on table for cool nights.

When lid is not needed for germination, it should be cut off so that it does not draw plant stems crookedly towards daylight.

Do not give water until soil is becoming dry and the underneath cardboard is almost dry. But don't allow seedlings to wilt.

Getting a start on seed sowing soon will help to make a success of hardy plants outdoors by some early time in April, and these small numbers are not too much to handle in the average home.

Copycat church arsonist?

EDMONTON (UPC) — The St. Joseph's Roman Catholic Cathedral has become the fourth church deliberately set afire in two weeks and police fear a "copycat" arsonist was responsible.

A church employee, about to open the church Thursday afternoon in preparation for a lenten mass, spotted flames leaping from the altar area and alerted the fire department.

Although the fire, fought by 50 firefighters and 12 units of equipment, was brought under control in less than a half-hour, intense heat continued to char the church interior.

Asked if the blaze could be linked to other church fires, fire investigator Capt. Tom Marsden said: "I wish I knew. All I know is that it is sick."

Police believe the arsonist gained entry to the church by breaking a window.

Two fire fighters were treated for minor injuries after a section of the roof material fell on them. One of them was knocked unconcious.

Two separate fires at the Beth Shalom Synagogue Feb. 13 and again last Tuesday destroyed six priceless sheepskin Torah scrolls and caused more than $1 million damage.

French pilots threaten suit

MONTREAL (CP) — An association representing French-speaking pilots has threatened Air Canada with legal action if it does not withdraw a directive ordering them to speak English with radio operators who do not speak French at the airline's ground stations.

Marcel Deschamps, president of the Association des Gens de l'Air du Quebec, said Thursday evening that the association's lawyers sent a legal notice Feb. 22 warning that it would ask for a contempt-of-court citation if the airline did not annul the directive within five days.

The directive violated a permanent injunction issued in 1976 by Quebec Superior Court Justice Jules Deschenes ordering Air Canada to cease preventing pilots from using French in air-ground communication with the airline's ground stations, Deschamps said in a telephone interview from his home in Quebec City.

Deschamps said Air Canada did not respond to the legal notice within the five-day period and airline spokesman Jean-Pierre Ranger said Thursday evening he did not know if the company's lawyers had replied to the notice.

But Air Canada said in a statement that it would issue a notice today "reminding all pilots that either French or English may be used in communications with Quebec radio operators and that measures have been taken to ensure that bilingual personnel are always present."

Maritime throne speeches stress oil rights, energy

HALIFAX (CP) — Control of offshore resources and energy conservation were the main topics of throne speeches in two Maritime provinces Thursday.

A budget speech in Prince Edward Island also addressed itself to energy issues.

The Nova Scotia legislature opened with a throne speech promising that the jobs and other benefits of any offshore oil or natural gas activity will go to Nova Scotians.

The throne speech read by Lt.-Gov. John Shaffner stressed energy self-sufficiency as Nova Scotia's top priority. The government said it is determined to invest substantially in energy projects.

It also promised aid for senior citizens, small businesses and the handicapped.

The speech drew faint praise from the leaders of the two opposition parties.

Benoit Comeau, interim Liberal Opposition Leader, said the government's proposed program is largely a rehash of what it promised last year.

The government will immediately start negotiations with the federal government to reach an agreement on offshore jurisdiction, the speech says.

The Newfoundland government throne speech opening a new legislature session reaffirmed the determination of Premier Brian Peckford's Progressive Conservative government to obtain ownership of undersea minerals, control of the fisheries and a rearrangement of a power deal with Quebec.

"In order to protect our society and to maximize our benefits, the government will take the necessary steps to ensure that the province's rights to its offshore oil and gas resources are preserved and recognized," the speech said.

With the offshore Hibernia field already known to be capable of producing 20,000 barrels of oil daily and with hydrocarbon showings in two of three test wells now being drilled, the question is one of the first things Peckford plans to discuss with prime minister-elect Pierre Trudeau.

Trudeau has said previously that Newfoundland's claims to ownership of its undersea minerals should be settled by the Supreme Court of Canada.

The speech said Newfoundland's ownership is necessary to ensure it is not capsized by a boom-and-bust economy that might happen if commercial oil development goes ahead under federal rules.

And in Prince Edward Island, starting today, Islanders will pay 10 cents more for a package of cigarettes, about half a cent more for a litre of gasoline and diesel fuel, another one per cent sales tax, and can expect personal income taxes to rise this summer.

Under the provisions of the provincial budget introduced Thursday, Finance Minister Lloyd MacPhail also has called for a 12.3-per-cent increase in government spending in the coming fiscal year.

Pacific Press, IWA top strike lost-time lists

A bitter strike that halted production of Vancouver's two daily newspapers for eight months accounted for almost one quarter of the total man-days lost to labor disputes in B.C. during 1979, says a labor ministry report.

The report shows that although work stoppages in the province amounted to 665,031 man-days, a drop from 754,022 man-days in 1978, there was an increase in the number of work stoppages.

The strike by six unions at Pacific Press accounted for 167,400 man-days lost. Next highest, was the 82,423 man-days lost when the International Woodworkers of America walked out in the summer.

The total man-days lost was the lowest since 1971, with the exception of 1977 when the federal anti-inflation program was in full effect.

There were 126 work stoppages recorded during 1979, an increase of 22 from the previous year.

On an industry basis, the largest number of work stoppages occurred in the manufacturing sector where 42 disputes involved 25,639 workers and 419,134 man-days.

The average number of workers per dispute dropped for the second year in a row. In 1979, there were an average 407 workers directly involved in each dispute, compared with an average of 451 in 1978.

Crosbie: Was I too tough?

David MacDonald and John Crosbie were two of the brightest lights in the short-lived Conservative government. But the political veterans shared a common mistake — one that stripped them of their portfolios and their party of power in the Feb. 18 election: They forgot about politics in their haste to make policy. Carol Goar and Mary Janigan, FP News Service Ottawa correspondents, report on how the two men are handling their defeat.

By CAROL GOAR
FP News Service

OTTAWA — "Polio, tetanus, typhoid and gamma globulin — whatever that is."

John Crosbie turned his nose up at the list in his hand, then looked at his wife Jane hopefully. "The nurse says they aren't absolutely necessary, just recommended. I don't know if I'll bother getting them.

She smiled indulgently. She had stopped in at her husband's Parliament Hill office on her way home from a downtown shopping trip.

The Crosbies are going to China soon to forget about the election that stripped the 48-year-old Newfoundlander of the finance minister's job which he alternately loved and swore about — and hence the need for immunization shots.

A few days before relinquishing his cabinet portfolio, Crosbie — wearing a tan cashmere turtleneck and wool trousers — relaxed on a leather sofa in his office and put some of his feelings into words.

It was not the blustery House of Commons joker who spoke, not the spellbinder of the campaign trail, nor the tough-talking finance minister. It was a mellower, more reflective John Crosbie than most Canadians have seen.

He's still hurting from the hammering his party received at the polls — in large part because of his gasoline tax — last week.

He's still probing and re-living the eight months the Conservatives were in power, wondering if his "tough guy" approach to the economy was too inflexible, exploring ways he might have softened his budget, asking himself if (as his critics complained) he was single-mindedly obsessed with cutting the deficit.

It's no accident that he's going to the other side of the globe to get away from it all. Crosbie admits frankly that one of the great attractions of floating up the Yangtze River is that it is so totally removed from the world of bonds, debentures, interest rates and price statistics that has consumed him since last June.

In the strangely unbusy days since the election, it has helped to have an exotic 18-day holiday to think about.

He also thinks he did the Liberals a favor — although he didn't see it that way at the time — by preparing Canadians for the age of expensive energy. Last spring, when the Conservatives came to power the idea of a $4 or $5-a-barrel oil-price increase was unthinkable. Now, although they still complain, people seem resigned to paying more than they would once have believed possible for energy.

Stretching the available tax dollars to pay for fuel is the biggest immediate headache the Liberals will inherit when they are sworn in next week. But Crosbie says that problem may pale by comparsion with two crises he sees just looming on the the horizon.

— Inflation in the United States is now running at an annual rate of more than 18 per cent. Prices are sure to begin climbing much more rapidly in Canada than in the 1970s. "Our society will be turned upside down."

— Even if the government's deficit remains at its present size, it is becoming more costly by the day to finance it. Borrowing costs are practically prohibitive. "It's already hard to get long-term money and if you can, the cost is fantastic."

Once he gets started, Crosbie finds it hard to stop himself from talking economics, dreaming about deficits, puzzling his way through the mess the new finance minister will soon have to untangle. He cares too much for a man who no longer has the power to change things.

Looking around his spacious office, with its brown velvet curtains, thick carpet and fine view of downtown Ottawa, Crosbie suggested playfully: "I like this office. Why should I leave it after nine short months?

"I could fool them yet. For all anybody knows, (Prime Minister designate Pierre) Trudeau may be planning to make me his finance minister. I could change my budget a bit, re-introduce it and go right on. Then we'd have a real national government."

For once, he didn't laugh at his own joke.

Last week's defeat is still too close for comfort. But in China it will be a world away.

MacDonald: touch of class

By MARY JANIGAN
FP News Service

OTTAWA — He has a brood of four youngsters ranging from five months to 12 years old, a couple of mortgages and no job. He chafed for 14 years on the opposition benches, preparing for the heady cabinet clout that finally came his way, only to be snatched from him a scant nine months later. He launched novel departmental policy reviews that the new government could now simply ignore.

And yet the Honorable David MacDonald is handling his defeat these days with easy grace, unsettling musings — and a Tory touch of class. While many of his former cabinet colleagues have been berating voters with bitter prophecies, this departing minister has been munching cough drops for a cold, trundling through a round of tearful farewell parties and trying to settle his unemployed staff.

He's partisan in his conviction that the Conservatives lost for all the wrong reasons. But he has also managed to patch a kind of melancholy optimism over the double-barrelled loss of his Prince Edward Island riding and his posts as minister of communication, secretary of state and minister responsible for the status of women.

"I'm very worried," he concedes, citing the children and the mortgages and an ambitious renovation project started last August on his family's old downtown Ottawa house. "And I suppose I could be bitter if I thought about it, but there never seems much advantage in being bitter. The people who benefit the most from defeat or setbacks are those who turn defeat around."

Many Canadians remember MacDonald as the lone — and lonely — Tory who voted against the War Measures Act in 1970. It was a stand that provoked fury and abuse and it almost scuttled his political career. And then, as the years passed and his judgement was exonerated, that same stand became the cornerstone of a formidable reputation that crossed all party lines.

MacDonald says now that his 1970 trials braced him for the topsy-turvy swings of the 1979 and 1980 elections.

"I felt at the time that there was a willing suspension of judgement on the part of almost everybody in this country," he says. "And in this election we witnessed an almost total suspension of judgement on the budget and on the alternatives to the budget.

"There was no real examination of what the prime minister or Pierre Trudeau were saying. People just saw our proposal of 18-cents-a-gallon (tax increase on gasoline) and said 'No'. It was simplistic judgement writ large and it reflects a kind of superficiality of political judgement that I find disturbing."

It's clear that the election has deepened that old streak of cynicism about the electoral process. MacDonald sees the brief Tory tenure as an exotic plant, nipped before it flowered. And he lays the blame for the scything on his own party, arguing that its members neglected politicking.

He says now, wistfully, that he should have made more efforts to publicize his own departmental exploits such as a four-point agreement with suspicious provincial education ministers. With minimum fanfare, he launched hearings on satellite and pay television, a full-scale probe into Canadian culture and an innovative study on the way advertisers portray Canadian women. Politically, however, he was one of the over-protected ministers, shielded from the public by over-anxious aides and a crushing workload.

"Somebody could do a morality play on the notion of winning in 1979 because the public didn't like the Liberal government that was there and the notion of losing in 1980 because the public didn't recognize what was there," he says.

"In a strange way, the Progressive Conservative government was a very moral one — everyone from Joe Clark on down attempted to be very responsible. The budget was a classic of its kind, one of the most realistic and honest I've ever seen.

"But we didn't sell ourselves — and in politics you live by perceptions, not reality. Sure, there's a tendency to be demoralized because we lost. But I'm kind of bullish about the status of the party and the status of Clark: He stuck to his guns right through to the bitter end and he stands higher in my estimation now than when he entered the election."

MacDonald says that he hopes he left a permanent legacy in his department by blending the cultural concerns of secretary of state with the "hardware" problems plaguing the communications department. He proudly recounts how he once startled provincial ministers by saying that he didn't care who had jurisdiction over cable television as long as it was used wisely.

"I'll miss that opportunity and challenge — I was preparing myself for a long time, 13 or 14 years, to get into those things and now I feel like a mother hen, hoping that the Liberals don't let them die."

Meanwhile, he's considering the possibility of radio or television work or perhaps a research project on communications. A Halifax parish has offered him a job but the former United Church minister says he'd prefer to work in a church social- policy position: "But nobody has made me an offer I couldn't refuse yet".

He figures that he'll stay in Ottawa — because he doesn't want to uproot the children. And he predicts that in four or five years, he'll be back in the running for a part in his ongoing political morality play, the House of Commons.

Socreds flip, Maggie sails

The provincial government has reversed itself and will put the Princess Marguerite back on the Victoria-Seattle run again this summer, the Times learned today from a reliable source.

The government has been under intense pressure from local businessmen and tourist officials over its decision to replace the Marguerite with the Queen of Prince Rupert.

The Times has learned that the government has retained a Seattle marine broker, who is now in Washington, D.C., arranging an extension of a waiver granted last year by the U.S. Coast Guard which exempted the Marguerite from new marine sanitation regulations.

They would have otherwise required expensive holding tanks to be installed in the 32-year-old steamship.

A coast guard spokesman in Seattle said today a number of exemptions have been arranged for vessels for special reasons. If they were about to be sold or scrapped, for example, the owners didn't want to waste money upgrading the ship.

It would be possible to grant the Marguerite another year's extension, he said. That decision would have to be made at Coast Guard headquarters in the U.S. capital, however.

The provincial government until now has been adamant on getting rid of the Marguerite. Finance Minister Hugh Curtis last month announced that the smaller Queen of Prince Rupert would be refitted for the Seattle service.

But in the last two weeks, the government has apparently realized that the Rupert cannot be drydocked and refitted in time for the traditional mid-May start-up date.

Experts have also advised the government that it would be impractical to have the slower Queen of Prince Rupert make two round trips a day, to bring the total carrying capacity up to the Marguerite's.

The B.C. Steamship Corp., the government corporation which has operated the vessel since the province bought her from the CPR seven years ago, commissioned consultants to study the Marguerite.

Transportation Minister Alex Fraser has said they determined the ship was unsafe, but Canadian coast guard officials have refuted that claim. They inspected her last year and approved her for the Seattle run.

Recently the pressure to retain the Maggie one more year has begun to build.

B.C. girds for surge in heroin

By DEREK SIDENIUS

B.C.'s top crime-fighting organization — the Coordinated Law Enforcement Unit — is bracing for a massive upsurge in the heroin trade.

Top CLEU officials told the Times the breakdown in the mid-East political scene has virtually wiped out efforts by drug enforcers to curb poppy growing.

Fields which have been dormant for years are now being cultivated and drug smugglers have launched a major effort to process and move heroin through Europe into the multi-billion dollar North American market, according to field intelligence sources.

The threat of a massive increase in heroin has alarmed CLEU and its counterpart drug-fighting agencies across Canada and the U.S.

Dr. Malcolm Mathieson, chairman of the drug strategy committee of the attorney-general's ministry, said in an interview Thursday Mideast heroin is already appearing in cities along the east coast of North America.

If the flow isn't checked, he said, he fears a return to the high heroin growth rate experienced in B.C. in the early 1970s.

During that period the number of known heroin addicts more than doubled to about 6,000 in B.C.

Another 3,000 to 4,000 persons were casual heroin users.

The figures are about the same today and represent 60 per cent of the heroin addict population in Canada.

Mathieson said the Mideast threat has created a critical situation and called for the provincial and federal governments to work out a common policy.

Mathieson said B.C. is pushing for a multi-strategy approach.

Essentially it wants a larger share of Canada's drug enforcement manpower stationed in B.C.

The province has 60 per cent of the addicts but only 25 per cent of the manpower.

In addition the province is anxious to tackle the demand side of the problem — subjecting addicts to treatment programs.

But a joint federal-provincial task force set up

Midnight limit set on decals

Midnight tonight's the deadline to get your 1980 licence decal affixed to your vehicles.

In most cases the decal goes on the rear plate but read the instructions on the back first to be sure.

Motorists who forget can expect the worst.

Greater Victoria police will start issuing tickets at one second past midnight.

Motorists who have bought decals but who neglect to display them will face a $15 fine.

Motorists who haven't bought the new decals and are caught driving will face a minimum $285 fine.

And those motorists who think they can just leave their unlicenced cars parked on the street or in public-access parking lots will be sadly mistaken.

There's a fine for that, too — $35.

There is only one safe place to park unlicenced vehicles, police say, and that is private property.

Nurses' fight to win better pay is being backed by B.C. Medical Association and doctors around the province. Nurse Valerie Hampton pins button on Dr. Kenneth Wilson at Royal Jubilee Hospital.

Foresake patients? Nurses find thought inconceivable

By PAUL MINVIELLE

B.C.'s registered nurses voted 98.1 per cent in favor of strike action Tuesday but few of them can conceive of actually having to abandon their patients.

Most find the idea unthinkable.

But they're bound and determined to get a square financial deal and in their fight for more pay, they're being backed by the B.C. Medical Association.

Jo Vipond, a registered psychiatric nurse as well as an RN, took time out on a coffee break this morning to tell the Times the vote the nurses took was merely to show solidarity with the Registered Nurses Association of B.C.

The RNABC is the nurses' professional group as well as its bargaining agent.

Vipond can't understand how the situation arose.

Asked if she thought nurses might settle for less than the 18 per cent in one year the RNABC has demanded, she shakes her head.

"Grocery clerks, liquor store employees . . . they all get more than we do. We won't settle for less."

But the consensus among nurses is that a settlement will be reached long before a strike is necessary.

If there is a strike, the essential services in any hospital will probably be used to keep most of the full-time nurses working.

One nurse said there would be action rather than a full-scale strike and suggested one move might be to set up a picket line just before a shift change.

Nurses coming to work wouldn't be able to cross the line to report to work, so the nurses on duty would have to stay on for an extra shift, at overtime rates.

But no nurse interviewed by the Times believes she'll actually have to be off the job and without pay for any length of time.

If it comes to that, there will be no strike benefits to live on, as the RNABC has no strike fund.

Alice Baptist, who works with Vipond in the ear, nose and throat department, was upset with talk-show callers suggesting nurses don't do any hard work or that a nurse's salary is usually a family's second income.

Baptist pointed out that there are no licensed practical nurses in the ENT ward — or in any other specialty ward — so nurses not only have all the responsibility for medication and care, but also do the menial tasks, imcluding emptying bedpans.

Vipond said she is separated and supporting a child.

"This isn't a second income — it's my only income."

She also mentioned the hazards of the job, such as coming into constant contact with disease on the medical floors.

And when she worked in psychiatric wards, there was the danger of being attacked.

Gas price up tomorrow

Gasoline retail prices will rise .7 cents a litre (3.15 cents a gallon) and fuel oil retail prices, 1.3 cents a litre (3.5 cents a gallon), effective Saturday, an energy department official said today in Ottawa.

In Victoria, retailers have not been advised of the increase but expect to be told on short notice to alter their pump prices.

The higher prices reflect a crude oil rise of $1 to $14.75 a barrel allowable Jan. 1. But under a directive from the federal government, refiners were not to pass the increase on for 60 days.

Prime rate 16¾%

Citibank, second largest bank in the United States, raised its prime lending rate on business loans to a record 16¾ per cent today. Several other U.S. banks promptly matched the increase.

Citibank raised its rate from 16¼ per cent, a rate it set just a week ago.

Meanwhile, in Montreal, the Royal Bank of Canada announced an increase in interest rates on mortgages and investment certificates, following the lead of several other banks.

The one-year open mortgage rate moves to 15 per cent from 14.75. The three-year open rate rises to 15.25 from 15 and three-and five-year term closed mortgage rates rise to 14.50 from 13.75.

Two arrested, $10,000 loot recovered

Oak Bay police have arrested two teenagers and seized more than $10,000 worth of property believed stolen from scores of vehicles in Greater Victoria in the past two months.

The youths, aged 17 and 18, both from Oak Bay, were to appear in provincial court later today charged with several counts of theft and fraud.

The arrests came after Oak Bay Constable Ron Coull became curious about four youths talking in the back of van parked in a shopping centre at Fort and Foul Bay at 4 p.m. Thursday.

Coull noticed a quantity of stereo equipment in the back and when the youths were unable to give a reasonable explanation where it all came from, he took them into custody for questioning, a spokesman said.

Two of the youths were subsequently released.

Later police searched two homes in Oak Bay and seized merchandise including stereo tapes, decks, tools, camera equipment, clothing, camping gear, and credit cards.

The spokesman said all the goods had been reported stolen from vehicles in Greater Victoria since the first of the year.

He said some of the credit cards that were stolen were used for a skiing vacation to Courtenay and purchase of motorcycle parts, clothing, food and lodging on the way.

Police believe several thousand dollars worth of goods were pawned or sold and are now attempting to tally the total take from the spree of auto break-ins.

Officers are also looking into the possibility other youths may have been involved in the thefts.

Five women freed

BOGOTA, Colombia (UPI) — Leftist guerrillas freed their last five women hostages today opening the way for negotiations on ransom demands for the release of 40 diplomats seized two days ago in an attack on the Dominican Embassy residence.

The five women walked out shortly after 9 a.m., entered four automobiles and left the area. Their release was about an hour later than the time originally announced.

The guerrillas, who are demanding $50 million ransom and freedom for more than 300 of their jailed comrades, had relased 10 other women, a 16-year-old boy and two wounded men Thursday night. They still are holding an estimated 40 diplomats, including the U.S. Ambassador and the papal nuncio.

Meanwhile, in Panama City, Panamanian leftists proclaiming sympathy with dissidents in El Salvador seized the Salvadoran Embassy in Panama City for two hours Thursday and held six persons hostage, then freed them and left peacefully.

Police said no one was hurt in the takeover.

Four trapped in Alta. mine

GRANDE CACHE, Alta. (CP) — Rescue efforts are continuing in hopes of reaching four miners trapped in the McIntyre-Porcupine mine near Grande Cache, a town about 430 kilometres northwest of Edmonton.

Company officials refused to comment on the situation today, saying only that they hoped to reach the trapped men by noon.

The men were trapped shortly before noon Thursday when the roof of a tunnel they were working in collapsed. The company has closed off access to the mine, located about 32 kilometres from Grande Cache, to all non-essential personnel.

The rescue crews — Allen would not say how many men that includes — worked through the night trying to dig their way through the rubble and twisted steel mine props. By early morning it was felt they were getting close to the point where the men were trapped.

One RCMP officer at the scene said some of the rescue workers were using their hands to remove rocks because they felt they were too close to the men to risk using heavy tools.

The nurses feel there is also the danger that if nurses' salaries don't catch up with other profressions and jobs, young girls will stop choosing nursing as a career.

Three student nurses, however, admitted they weren't going into nursing for the money.

Asked if they'd fill in on wards if ordered, Chris Fuller replied: "They can't do that. They just can't."

Ferry union bosses quit

By MIKE HUGHES

The B.C. Ferry and Marine Workers Union is in turmoil again, this time rocked by the resignation of six union officials.

The resignations came at a meeting Wednesday night in Vancouver where Bill Smalley, a Canadian Labor Congress official who is acting as a trustee of the 2,700-member union, presented an interim report.

Those who resigned were Leo Neill, secretary-treasurer; Matt Brown, business agent; Joyce Burns, second vice-president, and the chairmen from the union's three committee's at Langdale, Horseshoe Bay and Deas maintenance dock.

Smalley said Neill and Brown resigned following the tabling of a financial report critical of the procedures used in the handling of funds.

There was no charge of wrongdoing, however, Smalley added.

Smalley, in his report, recommends that Brown be fired to ease the in-fighting but such a proposal became redundant when Brown and Neill resigned at the beginning of the meeting.

Brown has long been recognized as one of the chief opponents of union president Shirley Mathieson and her style of administration.

Mathieson asked the CLC in December to place the union in trusteeship because of internal conflict.

Smalley said he is not convinced that his report had anything to do with the resignations.

In his report, Smalley recommended that the union poll its members on whether they are interested in returning to the B.C. Government Employees Union.

The move was rejected by the executive as being unnecessary.

The executive did approve another Smalley recommendation which called for a special convention to consider changes in the union's constitution as a means of solving some of the internal problems.

On the agenda would be the formation of some structure which would allow the licensed and unlicensed segments of the union "to live in some kind of harmony."

Up until 1977, the ferry workers were organized into the licensed and unlicensed components of the BCGEU.

However, after the ferry operations became a crown corporation, both groups were lumped together in the B.C. Ferry and Marine Workers Union, an affiliate of the BCGEU.

"There has been conflict between the licensed and unlicensed groups and Smalley said the ferry workers would have a stronger case before the Labor Relations Board for separate units if they resumed the two-component structure.

Smalley said he felt it was irresponsible for the officials to resign. By doing so they have denied the faction they represent the opportunity to voice an opinion, he added.

He said some of those who resigned still want a leadership convention but that is constitutionally impossible.

He said the union constitution states that special conventions cannot deal with the election of table officers.

The next opportunity to change leadership will be at the next regular convention in 1981, Smalley said.

He said he will likely continue on as a trustee of the union until after the special convention and then probably remain in a "watching situation" after that time depending on how things go.

Heroin upsurge

three years ago to draft recommendations on how to combat the problem has still not reached the ear of federal cabinet.

And B.C.'s controversial heroin treatment program, started last April, has become so embroiled in legal problems it's future is in grave doubt.

Mathieson said opium growing in remote regions of Iran, Afghanistan and Pakistan has mushroomed in the past year.

American drug intelligence reports estimated the total production in 1979 in the three countries — an area dubbed the Golden Crescent to distinguish it from the Golden Triangle of southeastern Asia — was 1,600 metric tons. Some 600 tons is believed to have found its way onto the international market.

Nielsen sugars Olympic rebate?

Consumer Affairs Minister Jim Nielsen has promised to help tourists from B.C. to recover money they forfeit by cancelling trips to the summer Olympics in Moscow.

Nielsen said Thursday he is trying to get Sears Travel Ltd. to improve an offer it has made to customers cancelling trips to the Soviet Union to protest the Russian invasion of Afghanistan.

Sears has extended the cancellation date to March 22 from March 1 but Nielsen said he still is not satisfied.

"Anyone cancelling at this time is required to pay a $400 cancellation fee," the minister said. "This represents only about 25 per cent of the total cost of the tour.

"If the games are cancelled or Canada boycotts them, travellers can cancel for only $100. This is a much more reasonable figure."

Truck ignites on ferry

Spontaneous combustion is believed the cause of a fire that broke out in some insulation in a semi-trailer on the B.C. Ferries Queen of Victoria Thursday afternoon.

The fire was spotted by a passenger as the vessel was approaching Swartz Bay on its 1 p.m. run out of Tsawwassen.

Crew alerted the truck driver, Ed Brooke, who was asleep in his cab, and kept the smouldering fire under control until the ferry docked.

Vehicles ahead of the truck were moved off and Brooke drove the truck into a parking lot where a fire truck was waiting.

The truck was owned by Grassick Transport Ltd., 220 Esquimalt.

Mideast report public

OTTAWA (CP) — Former Conservative leader Robert Stanfield has suggested Canada broaden its contacts with the Palestine Liberation Organization as the country seeks to enhance its relationships with the Middle East.

Stanfield, who conducted a Middle East study for Prime Minister Clark, also said the Canadian Human Rights Act might be a good instrument to counteract the Arab boycott-of-Israel policy.

And he said that Canada must be prepared to provide peacekeeping and other help if and when there is settlement of the Arab-Israel disputes.

Clark released the 25-page report only days before he was to step down and hand over the prime minister's job to Liberal Pierre Trudeau.

Mississauga spill turns into rail showdown

By GORD McINTOSH

MISSISSAUGA, Ont. (CP) — A federal inquiry into the causes of the Mississauga train derailment has turned into a high-stakes showdown between two railways as each tries to discredit the other.

The inquiry was supposed to determine the causes of the Nov. 10 train derailment and recommend corrective measures — not find anybody at fault.

But after four weeks of often-angry testimony and cross-examination it has become increasingly clear that the two railways — CP Rail and the Chesapeake and Ohio — are running a continuous debate over who is to blame.

This week, witness after witness was subjected to intense questioning. At several points, witnesses and lawyers exchanged angry words.

And one witness, a burly veteran railway man, was reduced to sobbing, quivering and stammering after a grueling cross-examination by Richard Shibley, an expensive Toronto lawyer who took over as CP Rail's counsel this week after the railway suddenly decided to change personnel.

The distraught witness kept wiping his hands of perspiration with a hankerchief while on the stand and was barely able to control his speech.

When Alex Jamieson, 47, Chesapeake's yard foreman at Chatham, Ont., got out of the witness box he vowed to a sympathetic lawyer that he would never submit himself to such an inquiry again — even if the police have to drag him there.

CP Rail, whose Train 54 derailed and forced more than 225,000 people to leave their homes in fear of exposure to deadly chlorine gas from one of the ruptured tanker cars, has gone on record at the inquiry that it intends put the blame at the door of the Chesapeake and Ohio Railway.

Sixty-seven cars — including the chlorine tanker and several other cars carrying hazardous chemicals — travelled Chesapeake's rails from Sarnia, Ont., before joining Train 54 at Chatham, Ont.

CP Rail has paid more than $7.5 million in out-of-pocket expenses to evacuation victims so far. And as a railway executive noted in the witness box this week, the company started to brace itself for scores of lawsuits as soon as officials viewed the spectacular crash.

Although there are more than 30 lawyers representing various interested parties in the inquiry room, only a handful are central players.

Commission counsels Robert Armstrong and Willson McTavish usually lead questioning of the railway men appearing as witnesses, but CP Rail's Shibley and Chesapeake's Dennis Lane take over centre stage.

Lane, big, burly and affable, often leaves his table to address witnesses in explaining a question.

He's as aggressive as the abrasive Shibley. And that's probably a good thing. It's been a bad week for Chesapeake.

It started with CP Rail winning a standoff in its battle to keep confidential the results of its internal investigation into the derailment.

The matter is not resolved, but the railway has been able to keep such things as the names of dispatchers on duty the night of the accident out of the hands of the other lawyers.

On Tuesday, Shibley said Chesapeake overhauled the tanker car believed responsible for the crash at a shop that is not equipped to do major repairs.

Among the repairs done was the repacking of journal boxes on all the car's wheels. The inquiry has heard that a journal box overheated, causing a wheel to seize and the train to derail.

Wednesday, Shibley accused Chesapeake of violating Canadian transport commission regulations in transporting dangerous commodities. Lane argued that the regulations were not applicable to the class of freight train in question.

Things have not been quiet internally for CP Rail. It started the inquiry with Norman Chalmers as the commission counsel, but Monday it announced the lawyer had more pressing affairs to attend as the railway's general counsel for its eastern region and was turning over duties to Shibley.

Mao put down

PEKING (UPI) — The Chinese Communist Party today announced a massive political shakeup consolidating the power of Vice-Premier Deng Xiaoping and downgrading the image of the late chairman Mao Tse-tung.

Four members of the Communist Party Political Bureau, the country's top decision making body, were fired. All were holdovers from the era of Mao's 1966-76 Cultural Revolution.

The shakeup was announced by Peking Radio and Central Television after the close of the fifth plenary session of the party's 11th Central Committee, which started last Saturday and closed today.

The Central Committee also decided to call a general congress of the Chinese Party before the next scheduled session in 1982, in the light of "changed world conditions."

Diplomatic sources in Peking said the Congress — 12th in the history of the 55-year-old party — might take place as early as next summer.

The Central Committee also rehabilitated the honor of Mao's arch-political rival, former Chief of State Liu Xiaoqi (Liu Hsiao-Chi) who was driven from power in 1968.

The Central Committee also re-established the party's once powerful party secretariat which was demolished during the Cultural Revolution.

The party also called for a crackdown on China's civil rights movement, recommending a change in the constitution to outlaw the pasting up of wall posters, a traditional Chinese form of political expression.

Thai PM resigns office

BANGKOK (Reuter) — Prime Minister Kriangsak Chomanan of Thailand resigned today after 27 months in office, plunging the country into a major political crisis.

The 62-year-old retired army general announced his decision at a special joint session of parliament called to defend his government's economic policies in the wake of widespread criticism over recent oil price increases.

A special session will be held Monday to sound out opinions on a successor for Kriangsak, who took power in a 1977 coup.

New York

Stock prices turned upward today in a mild technical rally from the declines of the past 2½ weeks.

In the news, the U.S. government reported that the index of leading economic indicators dropped 0.7 per cent in January, for its fourth straight monthly decline.

Analysts saw that as a tentative signal that some slowing of the economy was in the offing, although the experts are still widely divided about the chances of a recession and its prospective timing.

Several large banks, meanwhile, raised their prime lending rates to a record 16¾ per cent. The increase in the basic charge on blue chip loans had been expected in view of recent rises in other interest rates.

London

The London stock market fell moderately near the close of light trading today.

The Financial Times index was down 1 to 468.1.

Industrials were mixed, oils firmed and banks and golds declined.

AN ADVERTISING SUPPLEMENT TO THE VICTORIA TIMES, FEB. 29, 1980

HOMES TODAY

Dash of originality gives these two Victoria homes "a touch of class"

This house was built in 1913. It had an orchard around it, and a verandah across the front. In subsequent years, the verandah disappeared, and a garage was built on.

Later still, the garage became a TV/recreation room, (accomplished, incidentally, with beams and planking from the old Bapco Paint factory which stood where Laurel Point condominiums are today).

Present owners think the painting on the old garage doors was done about ten years ago. According to Peter Macnair, anthropologist at the Provincial Museum, it is an adaptation of a Kwakiutl whale, the design having been elongated to fit the space. The whale's head is in the centre, with a pectoral fin on either side, the fluked tail at centre top. Typical of native art, though the killer whale has only one dorsal fin, two were shown in order to produce a bi-laterally symmetrical design.

Bob and Barbara Brown have owned the house for three years, don't know who did the painting, but they enjoy the original touch its color brings to what would otherwise seem, from the outside, like a very ordinary house.

It's a sun porch to dine in; it's a shield from chilly off-shore breezes; it's an impressive entry; inviting by day when its tall glass windows reflect trees and sky, welcoming by night when lights shine through the gold colored glass along the sides and top.

It's a glass lobby as tall as the house itself put onto the 30-year old house a few years ago by a local contractor/builder who acquired the glass from a store which was being pulled down.

Victoria and Terry Gains, who own the house presently, say that people often stop to take a better look as they drive by, drawn by that individual touch that gives their home such personality.

INTERIOR DESIGN

A fireplace that only looks off-centre

By PAULINE GRAVES

Although in the winter, or in cold weather at any season, a cheery blaze in the fireplace lifts the spirits, during warm weather the black hole of the fireplace opening adds nothing attractive to the room.

Plants can be placed to hide the soot or decorative screens can be used, but a better idea is to have a fireplace that looks good whatever the season.

Such a fireplace is shown here, in a home by architect Barry Berkus and interior designer Carole Eichen. The fireplace appears to be almost in the room's corner, but actually it is just off-center. Red brick and wood frame the fireplace and continue to the adjacent wall, and because they cover just this wall segment, they create the ilusion that the fireplace location is at the side.

Two courses of the 11-inch long brick comprise the mantel, the lower course installed on a steel plate set back 3½ inches from the front edge of the upper course.

Below, the hearth uses the same brick, the outer edge perpendicular to the wall, and the inner three set parallel, for a total depth of 22 inches, and the height is 11 inches.

Center of the whole structure, though, is a light, airy painting, which, with the heavy structural materials around it, draws one's attention away from the empty fireplace opening.

Painting a cement drive and re-grouting tiles

Q. We have, I believe, successfully filled some cracks in our concrete driveway with cement and glue. Now we would like to paint it. Can you tell us about doing it? First, be sure the surface is thoroughly cleaned. Wash away oil and grease. Remove dirt and other materials with a wire brush.

If there is a white salt-like material adhering to concrete, it is probably efflorescence, caused by moisture which dissolves salts in the interior of alkaline materials and carries them to the surface. Efflorescence must be removed before painting. Do not wet the surface or more crystals may appear.

Solvent-thinned, rubber-based paints are ideal for painting concrete surfaces exposed to weather, including swimming pools. They provide excellent resistance to alkali and water penetration and resist abrasion.

After an alkali-resistant primer has been applied, a finish coat should be used to resist exposure. Two finish coats are more satisfactory than a one-coat finish.

For best results, always choose a quality paint and use a special masonry brush or roller. As for spraying, I would check with the dealer to make sure whether the paint you buy is suitable for spraying. I would prefer the roller application myself.

Q. We have Spanish tile in our entry as well as on our double-sided fireplace hearths. It has wide (one-and-one-fourth inches) gray grout joints and I hate it.

Is there any way the grout can be stained to blend more harmoniously with the reddish warmth of the tile? Or could we tile over the existing tile on the hearths with a ceramic-type of Spanish tile? A. I know of no way of staining the grout to a satisfactory matching blend.

However, you could rake out the grout between the tile to a depth of about one-half inch. Then brush out all the loose particles and wet the surfaces with clear water. Then fill the joints with a fairly stiff, but workable mixture of ready-mixed patching grout.

If color is to be added, use only limeproof cement color sold by dealers in masonry materials. To determine amount of color needed for your particular purpose, make a few small trial batches before mixing the full batch.

Your fireplace hearths could be covered with a ceramic tile over the existing tile, if the latter is presently in good condition.

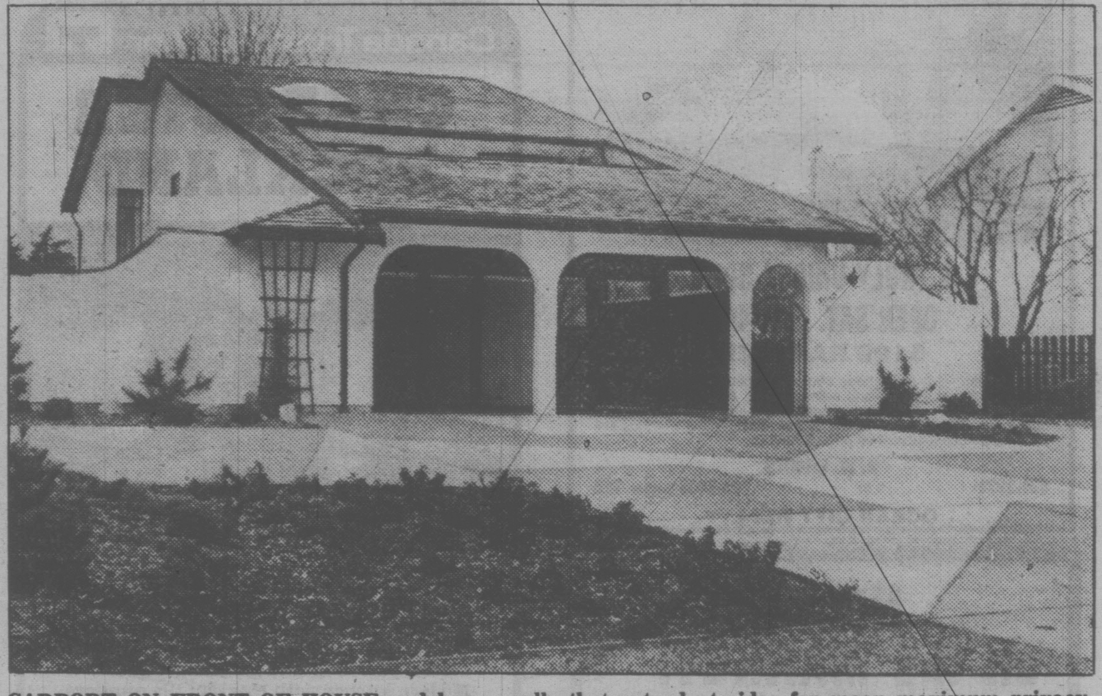
THIS PLAN OF MAIN FLOOR shows layout of rooms, but not window or door placement.



CARPORT ON FRONT OF HOUSE and house walls that extend at sides for mean maximum privacy. Combination of pebbled and smooth concrete in driveway and curved wrought iron gate lend sophisticated look. Sliding glass doors from studio and guest bedroom open onto sun-deck in-set into roof.

Owner-designed home was planned with sun's path in mind

By ANNE SWANNELL

Ray and Rosemary Wilson wanted a house oriented towards the sun and which would at the same time afford them privacy and roominess.

They bought a lot in the University district on a street which runs north-east-southwest, got busy with a pencil and ended up with floor plans for a 2,400 square foot home. They took their ideas to W. F. Lindsay Gardiner, a Victoria designer, who did the working drawings and designed the exterior facade.

The house was built during the summer and fall of 1978 by Westmont Ventures Ltd.

The most important consideration when Ray and Rosemary Wilson planned and laid out their house was that breakfast room and dining room have sunny exposures, with privacy from the street, and from surrounding homes, so that a quiet breakfast-a-deux or a large dinner party would be undisturbed, and undisturbing.

As well as privacy from the outside world, Ray and Rosemary wanted privacy for each other, and designed the house so that they both could have it. "Both Ray and I grew up in big older homes with large rooms" says Rosemary, "so we needed the house to feel spacious."

A utility room with access to the carport, a breakfast room with patio off, kitchen, formal dining room, and another patio are all in-line on the sunny side of the house. The fireplaces are on the chilliest north east wall.

There are four rooms upstairs, and two bathrooms, in addition to the powder room beside the front door. The master bedroom and Ray's den open onto the balcony/deck on the back of the house, and the guest bedroom and Rosemary's studio give onto the inset roof sundeck in the front.

The kitchen gives easy access to both informal breakfast room and large formal dining room. The utility room, between breakfast room and carport is, with its abundant counter-space, as ideal for unloading groceries as it is for folding laundry.

Though the Wilsons' taste in furniture and decor is elegant and traditional, this is a house that reflects an unconventional and inventive approach to planning the use of space. For instance, the space under the stairs to the second floor, which most people use as a cupboard, is where the Wilsons house their stereo cabinet and all their records.

A built-in baking centre in the kitchen is another unusual feature.

Windows throughout the house are curtained with sheers, which let in light and keep the privacy the Wilsons treasure.

Their favourite color is blue, and they have chosen a sophisticated shade of slate for carpeting throughout the entry, living, dining, stairway, upstairs hall and all but the master bedroom. This continuous flow of colour carries your eye through and therefor adds to the feeling of spaciousness.

In the living room, the blue's coolness is offset by touches of yellow, sunny green, and the golden glow of brass, and in fact, yellow tones are used to good effect throughout the house to complement the blue hues.

Another interesting feature of the house is the fact that there are no steps between outside and inside, so that you move from in to out with no impediment, no sense of separation.

Rosemary is a painter and Ray is with London Life. Both are justifiably proud of the home they have planned and brought into being together.

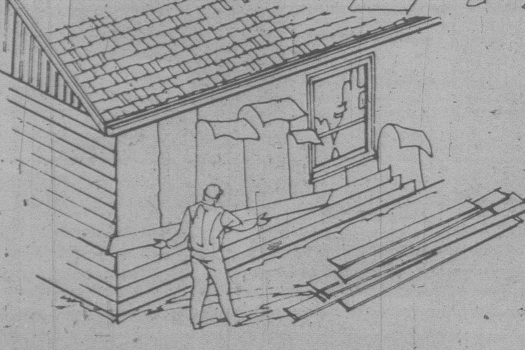
Add permanence and value to your home with one of these variations on a "brick" theme

Now there is no reason to shy away from adding brick beauty to the exterior of your home. You don't need expensive structural ties or foundation enforcements, because you won't have the full weight of structural brick. You can do it all with facing brick or stone such as Z-Brick.

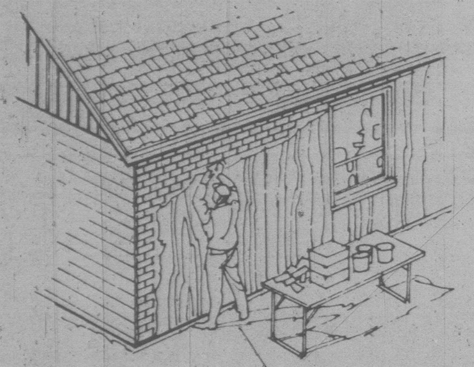
Information in this article was taken from a brochure called "Z-Brick Works Great Outdoors", which you can pick up at any Z-Brick display in local stores.

As with all facing applications, make sure that you have properly measured the area to be covered and have prepared the surface. On precast cement or concrete block, make sure that it is clean and free of dust and dirt. Surface should be "flat." If surface is covered with old lap siding or shingles, they must be removed first. Also make sure you remove all old building paper first.

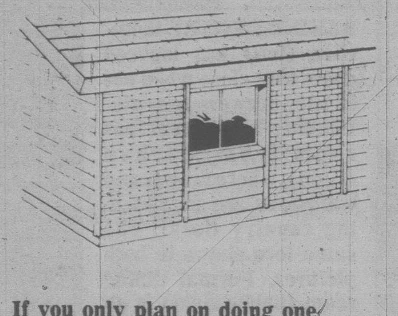
Use the step-by-step application procedure detailed in the back of this booklet. Start in the upper left hand corner and run a full row of bricks horizontally. Then alternate between full and half bricks down the vertical dimension of the walls. Then it's just a matter of filling in the rows. Use a level or "story pole" to correct for even rows.



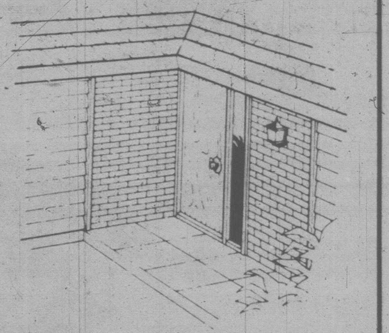
It's important to prepare the surface properly. The substrate must be sound prior to installing the facing.



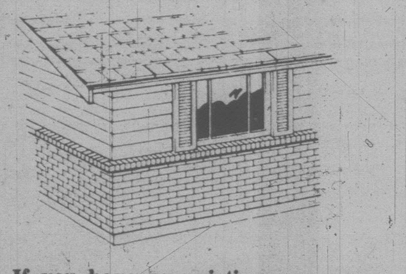
If you are covering a large expanse, you should incorporate a "story pole" to keep courses level. Take the facing brick out of ten to twenty boxes and mix them together. This will assure a totally random effect.. If you have access to a tile cutter, use it. It will save a considerable amount of time in cutting the bricks for details and corners.



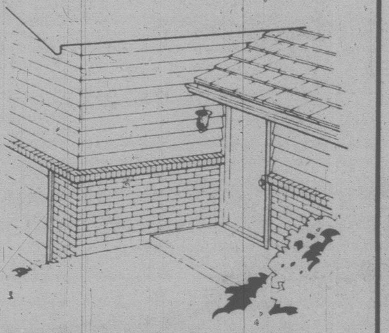
If you only plan on doing one facing wall, then apply vertical battens. These can be prestained 1x2 or 2x2's. This will give your brickwork a stunning "framed" appearance.

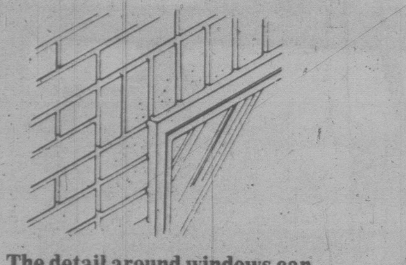


This same technique can be used to install a brick entryway around your doors. or can be used on a split level home. Add the structural brick effect to the lower floor by using brick facing brick and stone.

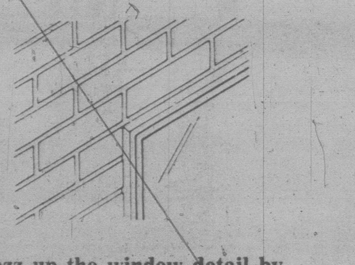


If you have an existing concrete wainscot, cover it with brick and leave the existing paneling, shingles or lap siding in place.

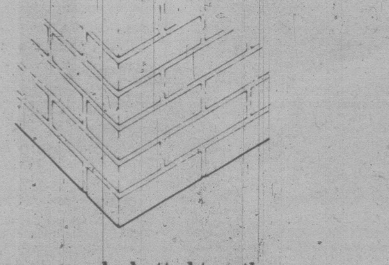




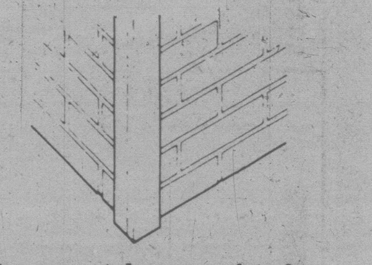
The detail around windows can be done by simply making vertical or horizontal cuts in the brick and continuing the same course alignment around the window area, by butting the brick flush to the existing frame.



Jazz up the window detail by using different courses. To do this, frame the vertical dimensions of the window with a stacked bond with full bricks. Do the horizontal detail with a 'soldier bond.' This should be done first, allowing for the regular courses to lay into place.



Corners can be butted together with a straight cut or they can be mitered and filled. They are filled with a mixture of brick dust (3 parts) and Z-Sealer (1 part). Let them dry and rasp off the excess. The filled corner is for the meticulous craftsman.



You can cut down on a lot of detail work by using any exterior grade batten or corner piece. Install the battens first and then just run the brick course right up to them.

Book tells what homes reveal about people

Are you achievement oriented? Do you like change in your life? Do you follow tasks to completion? Have you an exhibitionistic streak? In her "Psycho-Decorating", M. H. Harmon says that the way people decorate their homes reveals a surprising amount of information about their attitudes and personality. We all have strong personal preferences in the surroundings we choose, she says and these likes and dislikes can tell us much about ourselves, and about others. The shape and size of the coffee table, whether the legs of most furniture are curved or straight, whether walls are patterned or plain, whether the couch is velvet or matelasse are all indications. Published in 1977 by Wyden Books.

YOU CAN MAKE IT!

Send for 'Decoupage Made Easy'

By STEVE ELLINGSON

One of the most common items in Canada is a printed piece of paper, usually about 8" x 10", which signifies that the holder is someone special. It takes various forms . . . certificates of recognition for services rendered . . . awards for achievement . . . etc. Usually these precious bits of paper wind up yellowing and forgotten in the darkest corners of dresser drawers. Framing can be expensive. What to do? Why decoupage them, of course and bring your honors to light! Decoupage and hang them all over you office or den. Impress your friends and confound your enemies!

Decoupage (pronounced day-koo-pahje) is an ancient art that's been making a big comeback. It basically involves pasting down your favorite subject matter on a wooden plaque and then coating with a glass-like finish. However, the variations are endless (decoupage on purses, china and jewelry boxes included in our instructions). We'll give you the basics on this method of 'framing' your prints. You can also learn how to achieve the distressed, antique look of the parchment Declaration pictures shown here. To obtain the "Decoupage Made Easy" Pattern No. 495, and $2.00 (please add fifty cents extra for postage and handling) by cheque or money order to:

Mr John Hutchinson

Victoria, B.C.

Dear Mr Hutchinson:

My display ad that appeared last weekend in "Homes Today" was a great success! The "Open House" ad brought at least sixty people through 4429 Torrington during the weekend, and resulted in two offers to purchase. I was able to sell the home as a direct result of the ad. The owners have been transferred and must be in Prince George by March 1st. Needless to say, they are happy with the outcome.

My advertising in your supplement has always brought excellent results. I will continue to use it because it is a real "plus" to have it delivered each weekend to every subscriber to the TIMES and the COLONIST in the Victoria area, not to mention the out of town readers who may be planning to relocate here.

Finally, your personalised service helps make my job a little easier! Many thanks again,

Sincerely,

Sharon Daily

Danny in magic kingdom

Danny Kaye, long absent from television, returns March 6 to star in The 25th Anniversary of Disneyland, an hour-long special in which Danny will play 15 different characters.

It figures.

Danny's quarter-century affiliation as special ambassador to the United Nations' UNICEF program has confirmed his image as a unique Pied Piper of little folk throughout the world.

Kaye's capering, prancing brand of humor combined with his pixie's face and mop of blond hair have given the comedian a Peter Pan quality, a seeming fix on the fountain of youth.

At home in a yellow shirt and red sweater, his demeanor fixed in a puckish grin, he resembled nothing more than a Disneyland ride himself.

With all his talents and interests, Danny has been absent from show business for the better part of a decade.

Well past his 60th birthday, Danny ascribes his indefatigable energy to the fact that he is able to relax anywhere under any conditions.

One year he visited 65 cities in the U.S. and Canada in five days, speaking at each stop.

"Now I'm ready to buckle down and take a more active part in show business, including TV."

Danny said the CBS special will not be another tour of the various rides and other attractions in Disneyland although the entire show was filmed in the Magic Kingdom.

"Viewers will get a feel of the park and what it is all about," he said. "We start in an empty field that was once an orange grove from which Walt Disney built this wonderful place.

Tacoma television station KCPQ will be off the air from signoff Friday, Feb. 29, until a new TV operation appears on the channel next September.

KCPQ-TV has been seen in this area on Channel H (20) in victoria Cablevision's Augmented Channels Service, which is seen by converter or other type of tuner expander.

The station has been seen on the ACS system since late 1976. It was opened more than five years ago by a Tacoma school district, which spent about $400,000 to take over the licence of the old Seattle-Tacoma channel 13 after it went broke.

KCPQ became an affiliate of the PBS network but the licence officially remained commercial. A leading U.S. independent TV company, Kelly Broadcasting of Scramento, offered a reported $35,000,000 for the licence and the sale was recently approved despite a year-long campaign to keep public TV in Tacoma.

The change means Channel 9 in Seattle is the only station in this area broadcasting a PBS schedule. The new owners of KCPQ now are buying programs and plan to return to the air in September with syndicated shows, movies, news and their own public affairs programs.

Why should you buy a Hitachi Colour TV? The first reason would be because it has proven to be the most reliable TV on the market. It received top rating by one of the consumer magazines. We have been selling Hitachi now for four years and only had to repair three sets. 2nd reason, Hitachi developed a new picture tube which has 33% more picture elements. As a result, it is brighter and sharper and has better colour.
